DOCUMENT RESUME

ED 353 622 CS 508 049

AUTHOR	Hudson, Herman C., Ed.
TITLE	Spike Lee and Commentaries on His Work. Occasional Papers Series 2, No. 1.
INSTITUTION	Indiana Univ., Bloomington. Afro-American Studies.
PUB DATE	92
NOTE	92p.; A Martha C. Kraft Professorship Publication.
PUB TYPE	Collected Works - General (020) -- Reports - Evaluative/Feasibility (142) -- Reference Materials - Bibliographies (131)
EDRS PRICE	MF01/PC04 Plus Postage.
DESCRIPTORS	Auteurism; *Black Community; *Black Culture; Black History; Cultural Images; Film Criticism; *Film Production Specialists; *Film Study; Popular Culture; Racial Relations; Urban Culture
IDENTIFIERS	*African Americans; *Lee (Spike)

ABSTRACT

This monograph presents a critical essay and a comprehensive 454-item bibliography on the contemporary African-American filmmaker, Spike Lee. The essay, entitled "African-American Folklore and Cultural History in the Films of Spike Lee" (Gloria J. Gibson-Hudson), analyzes Lee's filmmaking approach from a cultural and historical perspective. The essay identifies Lee as a contemporary storyteller weaving his tales with the aid of a camera and demonstrates how his film narratives draw on both the historic and contemporary experiences of African Americans. The essay discusses five of Lee's films (made between 1984 and 1991) thematically, categorizing them under intra-racial issues and inter-racial issues. The bibliography (by Grace Jackson-Brown) provides citations from both scholarly and popular literature, encompassing newspaper articles, journal and magazine articles, chapters or sections from books, and reviews of films (most of the citations date from the last 5 years). The extensive 49-page bibliography is intended to be a comprehensive guide to literature that will assist students and researchers with an interest in Spike Lee. It is divided into six broad subject areas: Biography, Interviews, Production and Direction, Books and Book Reviews, Film Criticism and Film Reviews, and Entrepreneurship and Conduct of Life. (NKA)

****
* Reproductions supplied by EDRS are the best that can be made *
* from the original document. *
****

ED353622

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

"PERMISSION TO REPRODUCE THIS MATERIAL HAS BEEN GRANTED BY

Herman Hudson

TO THE EDUCATIONAL RESOURCES INFORMATION CENTER (ERIC)."

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
Office of Educational Research and Improvement
EDUCATIONAL RESOURCES INFORMATION CENTER (ERIC)

☑ This document has been reproduced as received from the person or organization originating it.

☐ Minor changes have been made to improve reproduction quality.

• Points of view or opinions stated in this document do not necessarily represent official OERI position or policy.

Occasional Papers Series 2, No. 1: 1992

Spike Lee and Commentaries on His Work

Herman C. Hudson, Editor

with the Assistance of Audrey Levasseur, doctoral Student in English

A Martha C. Kraft
Professorship Publication

Indiana University

A Publication of the Martha C. Kraft
Professorship

Indiana University
©1992

All rights reserved

Foreword

Spike Lee is the most prolific and controversial African American filmmaker of the 1980s and '90s. He has made five films, all of which have been successful both financially and aesthetically: She's Gotta Have It (1984), School Daze (1986), Do the Right Thing (1989), Mo' Better Blues (1990), and Jungle Fever (1991). His sixth film, Malcom X, due to be released in November 1992, is eagerly anticipated by critics, film-study students, and the general public.

Because of his stature as a filmmaker, we decided to devote an expanded Occasional Paper to Spike Lee which contains two sections—a critical essay and a comprehensive bibliography. The essay analyzes Lee's filmmaking approach from a cultural and historical perspective, and the bibliography provides citations from scholarly and popular literature, encompassing newspaper articles, journal and magazine articles, and chapters or sections from books.

Finally, we wish to express our appreciation for the work of the two contributors to this special Occasional Paper, Gloria Gibson-Hudson and Grace Jackson-Brown, whose competent scholarship made this publication possible.

HERMAN HUDSON

Contents

African American Folklore and Cultural History in the Films of Spike Lee 7
Gloria J. Gibson-Hudson

Introduction 7
Intra-racial Issues as Themes 11
Inter-racial Issues as Themes 23
Conclusion 34

Bibliography on Spike Lee (Shelton Jackson Lee, 1957-) 43
Grace Jackson-Brown

Introduction 43
Biography 46
Interviews 50
Production and Direction 52
Books and Book Reviews 58
Malcolm X: The FBI Files 58
Five for Five: The Films of Spike Lee 58
Do the Right Thing: A Spike Lee Joint 58
Uplift the Race: The Construction of School Daze 59
Spike Lee's She's Gotta Have It: Inside Guerilla Filmmaking 60
Film Criticism and Reviews 61
Malcolm X 61
Jungle Fever 62
Mo' Better Blues 64
Do the Right Thing 68
School Daze 77
She's Gotta Have It 82
Joe's Bed-Stuy Barbershop: We Cut Heads 86
Entrepreneurship and Conduct of Life 87

Photo: Hakim Rahsul

Gloria J. Gibson-Hudson is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Afro-American Studies and Assistant Director of the Black Film Center/Archive at Indiana University. She has conducted in-depth research and lectured extensively on the images of black women in film. She has published in Wide Angle, New York' Folklore, and The Western Journal of Black Studies and has contributed chapters on film to two books. Gloria Gibson-Hudson received her Ph.D. from Indiana University-Bloomington in folklore and ethnomusicology with an emphasis on the use of music in film. For 1992-93 she was awarded a National Research Council fellowship to study films by women of the African diaspora.

African American Folklore and Cultural History in the Films of Spike Lee*

Gloria J. Gibson-Hudson

"Storytelling is a dynamic form of remembering /recreating." Barbara Christian

Introduction

In front of a crackling fire, many decades ago, African Americans would sit, gaze into the flames, and listen intensely to a storyteller weave a marvelous tale. Some of these narratives contained survivals from African folktales, others represented a unique synthesis of European and African motifs. Some narratives, however, were based on everyday personal experiences, including the relationship between slave and master. Many folktales and personal narratives were passed down from generation to generation and subsequently recorded and placed in collections. Scholars from various disciplines continue to analyze African American folktales, personal narratives, and folk music for their historic, folkloric, and cultural relevance.

Although research has demonstrated that folklore can function as an analytical tool to help understand and evaluate creative cultural expression within a historical context, the relationship between African American film, folklore, and cultural history has rarely been explored.[1]

---

*A version of this paper appears in New York Folklore Vol. 18, No. 1-2, 1992.

Recently, however, film scholars have called for a critical examination of African American cinema and its relationship to culture. Todd Boyd states: "What is needed is a clear articulation of African-American cinema within a culturally specific context so as to avoid imposing the dominant discourse upon a textual system to which it does not apply."[2] In line with this challenge, this paper approaches Spike Lee's work from a cultural perspective. The basic premise identifies Lee as a contemporary storyteller weaving his tales with the aid of a camera. His film narratives draw on both the historic and contemporary experiences of African Americans.

This investigation examines selected dominant themes that structure Lee's films: She's Gotta Have It (1984), School Daze (1986), Do the Right Thing (1989), Mo' Better Blues (1990), and Jungle Fever (1991).[3] The analysis will demonstrate that Lee's themes are derived from African American cultural experiences and, further, that his themes reflect conceptualizations of black life found at the core of numerous African American folk traditions (music, folk narratives, jokes, etc.). A strictly thematic inquiry facilitates the analysis of the African American experiential relationships that exist in Lee's films as well as in other cultural creative expressions. The eminent scholar Houston Baker states of Lee's work: "His larger thematizations are what enable us to rank him among the creative company of blackamerican artists and intellectuals who have dedicated themselves and their works to cultural critique."[4] While this paper does not address plot development (chain of events), it does argue that Lee's thematic infrastructure (1) imparts cultural meaning in its own right over and above plot development and (2) evokes culture-specific images by presenting a unique synthesis of folk elements derived from everyday experiences.

The themes discussed in this article may be categorized under two major headings: intra-racial issues and inter-racial issues. These categories are not mutually exclusive. Intra-racial themes draw upon experiences such as color gradation, internalization of stereotypes, and the politics of identity within African American culture. Inter-racial themes explore the negative interactions between races, especially the effects of racism on African Americans.

In acknowledging the importance of Lee's themes, this analysis will demonstrate how the thematic infrastructure of Lee's work is derived from and informed by aspects of African American cultural history. The significance of this derivation resides in its ability to clarify aspects of African American culture for the viewer. As Baker observes: "Lee's films are not devastatingly original, telling us always things we do not know. What is striking about his work is that it is so thoroughly grounded in what we all know, but refuse to acknowledge or change."[5] This article concurs and maintains that the thematic use of folkloric and cultural elements within the film's context illuminates the folk-life experiences of African Americans. Moreover, Lee's use of folkloric elements functions as a creative mode of response to cultural and social conditions.

Lee's film themes incorporate aspects of cultural history mediated by African American folk traditions. Folklore functions as a mediator in that it reveals the "history of Black people in this country and their psychological reactions to the experience."[6] Scholar H. Nigel Thomas explains:

> To study folklore of black Americans is to examine their dreams, their aspirations, the mental curtains they designed to shut out the brutality of slave and postslave reality, the psychic wings on which they bore themselves temporarily away from oppressive pain, as well as the aesthetic objects—the blues, spirituals, folktales, toasts, etc. they fashion from their pain. Therefore, the study of black American folklore, is essentially a study of the survival of black people in America.[7]

Folklore, then, embodies shared cultural experiences. Awareness of the relationship between folklore and history heightens the understanding of African American social and cultural development through time. It also aids in the understanding of an evolving cultural identity, an important concern of Lee's films. As folklore scholar Simon Bronner states: "The center of folklore studies remains in tradition, in explaining human experience that takes the form of recurrent, expressive responses to social life and environment."[8]

A recent example of the folkloric approach used in literature studies is that employed by Thomas in his book From Folklore to Fiction: A Study of Folk Heroes and Rituals in the Black American Novel. In his analysis Thomas describes the means by which folklore and ritual are incorporated into African American literature not as isolated entities but rather as "an integral part of the quest of the characters and the revelation of the plot."[9] Thomas's analysis clearly demonstrates an intimate relationship between folk elements and literature.

In similar fashion, this paper asserts that Lee's use of folklore is central to the fabric of his films. In addition, analyzing the thematic structure of Lee's films within the context of African American cultural history enables us to recognize how his films correspond to other genres of African American expressive behavior and to see how these genres cross-pollinate. Scholars freely acknowledge the fact that "various artistic genres within cultures are not separate activities; rather they evolve from each other."[10]

The approach of this article, therefore, is not to critique the positive and negative attributes of Lee's individual films. (The bibliographic section of this publication contains numerous reviews and articles that provide in-depth criticism of his work.) Rather, this investigation seeks to uncover the dynamic, continual state of cross-pollination between African American folk traditions and cultural history and their creative manifestations within Lee's films. Cultural history and folklore, when viewed in concert, function to provide a powerful tool to depict Lee's work. Moreover, this analytical portrait suggests that Lee seeks not only to entertain but also to articulate the need for personal and communal enlightenment.[11]

Intra-racial Issues as Themes

Culture-specific interactions between African Americans—mates, friends, family and/or community members—constitute the conceptual framework for intra-racial themes. Lee's broad thematizations focus on attitudes, values, and subsequent behaviors that have an impact upon those relationships, such as sexism, intra-racial prejudice, the politics of identity, cultural devaluation, and internalized stereotypes. It is within the interpersonal intra-racial context that Lee transforms these and other issues derived from everyday reality into thematic structure. These issues are not mutually exclusive, nor can they be completely divorced from inter-racial reality. However, to isolate them demonstrates how they represent the cultural threads from which Lee composes his cinematic themes and how they form a kinship with other cultural creative expressions.

Intra-racial prejudice is deeply ingrained into the politics of identity and the fiber of African American cultural history. Moreover, the genesis of cultural identity is inextricably linked to the devastating experience of slavery, which helped form an ideology of identity perception. Miscegenation, perhaps more than any other agent, contributed to the development of a schism between light-skinned and dark-skinned blacks. The darker the individual, the more he or she was viewed as inferior and unattractive. Throughout African American history, attitudes of self-hatred and resentment have not diminished but, in fact, continue to thrive. Moreover, the adoption of a Eurocentric value system impedes individual and collective growth of African Americans: Scholars Geneva Gay and Willie Baber argue that African Americans need to be functionally bi-ethnic, Afrocentric and American. Further:

> The successful resolution of these challenges makes the difference between those Blacks who are psychologically encapsulated and > politically impotent (i.e. those who suppress the African aspect of self) and those who are healthy and engage in purposeful, expressive action to define and advance all dimensions of their ethnicity.[12]

At one end of the continuum are African Americans who are knowledgeable and expressive of their heritage. At the other end are those who suppress their ethnicity and criticize others who choose to "be black" or "look black." Consequently, diverse themes addressing intra-racial prejudice are profoundly entrenched in numerous genres of folklore performance. Although the politics of identity shifted during the sixties toward an Afrocentric concept of self, vestiges of intra-racial prejudice still remain today.

In the chapter "A Nigger Ain't Shit: Self-Degrading Tales" in Shuckin' and Jivin', Daryl Dance assembles narratives in which the evidence of intra-racial prejudice and self-hatred are illustrated. She states of this theme:

> Many jokes are intended solely for Black ears and contain severe criticism of alleged character defects in Blacks. Other tales ridicule the Black person's color and hair, apparently indicating an acceptance of them as badges of inferiority, or deal with the Black person's preference for things white.[13]

Stereotypes regarding skin color reflecting intra-racial prejudice permeate various folklore genres. Folk expressions such as "If you're brown—stick around, if you're yellow—you're mellow, if you're black—get back!" reflect Eurocentric values that are detrimental to self-affirmation and black solidarity.

The blues also provides commentary on skin color. Lawrence Levine states that "Brown was held up as the ideal in so many songs that it, rather than lighter shades, may have been the goal of those who used skin lighteners."[14] The following lyrics demonstrate how folk stereotypes were perpetuated by blacks through music. The lyrics of both of these blues songs represent a male perspective. However, the second song specifically identifies dark-skinned women as evil.

"Coon Song"

Coon, coon, coon, I wish my color would fade;
Coon, coon, coon, I'd like a different shade.
Coon, coon, coon, from mornin', night, and noon;
I wish I was a white man instead of a coon.

[Untitled]

Woh, I don't want no black woman, babe,
to bake no bread for me,
Lord I don't want no black woman, yeah, to
bake no bread for me,
Because black is evil, Lord, I'm 'fraid that she might poison me.[15]

Ethnomusicologists acknowledge the ability of music to reflect and reconstruct cultural history. Ethnomusicologist Alan P. Merriam posits: "Music is a part of culture, culture moves through time, and through music we can approach certain kinds of history."[16] Moreover, he maintains that "texts reflect mechanisms of psychological release and the prevailing attitudes and values of a culture."[17] Therefore, even though songs, jokes, and other expressions are sometimes performed in contexts of entertainment, they still function as social commentary. Most importantly, the deeply rooted prejudices found in everyday life and communicated in folklore performance "affected some of its victims to the point where they turned the hatred upon themselves and their peers."[18]

The theme and subsequent effects of intra-racial prejudice and the politics of identity are vividly portrayed in School Daze and Jungle Fever.[19] Both films capture the values associated with self-identity as they examine how those attitudes foster ill-will that impedes positive interpersonal development among African Americans. Racial stereotypes, which were perpetrated and perpetuated initially by whites, have been internalized by blacks and subsequently inflicted upon other black Americans.

School Daze is a multi-thematic, richly textured commentary that examines intra-racial prejudice. Toni Cade Bambara summarizes it succinctly: "School Daze takes a serio-comic look at caste, class, and gender contradictions among four rival groups of students: Da Naturals, the Gamma Rays, Da Fellas, and their frat members and pledges of Gamma Phi Gamma."[20] The major theme of the musical ingeniously pits the light-skinned Wannabees (want to be white) against the dark-skinned Jigaboos. Through verbal taunts, dialogue, and music, Lee exposes the innermost thoughts of these two groups. The psychological impact of color prejudice is juxtaposed with the behaviors of exclusion and self-hatred.

The music and lyrics of "Straight and Nappy: Good and Bad Hair" by Bill Lee communicate opposing ideologies of beauty and cultural consciousness. The Wannabees brag: "Don't you wish you had hair like this [straight], then the boys would give you a kiss," while the Jigaboos rebut: "If a fly should land on your head then I'm sure he'd break all his legs."[21] The issue here is not simply hair texture but cultural values, self-identity, and self-esteem. This song, as well as the film dialogue, demonstrates how Eurocentric values create a cultural schism that generates ethnic polarity.

The dramatization of intra-racial prejudice evokes a powerful audience response. For Lee, the relationship between film and audience becomes antiphonal. The audience is positioned inside the filmic experience, not outside. The concept of antiphonal interaction in African American expressive behavior acknowledges a "constant interaction between two sides of every performance frame."[22] As a dynamic interchange emerges, the theme excites personal and communal reflection and response.[23]

Conceptualizations regarding skin color are intricately linked to the issue of sexual desirability. Historically, the devaluation of black women, as well as the elevation of white women, has manifested itself in numerous ways. For example, during slavery, a visible difference between the treatment of male and female slaves existed. Feminist scholar bell hooks explains:

> The black male slave was primarily exploited as a laborer in the fields; the black female was exploited as a laborer in the fields, a worker in the domestic household, a breeder, and as an object of white male sexual assault.[24]

Perhaps most troubling was the sexism levied against black women by black men. The devaluation of black women combined with an appreciation of Eurocentric standards of beauty placed the black woman at the bottom of social valuation.

In the chapter "Oh Lord, Will I Ever? The White Woman and the Black Man" (again, from Shuckin' and Jivin'), Dance acknowledges: "A popular folk motif is the Black man's preference for the forbidden white woman, a motif which at times, also includes the white woman's attraction to the tabooed Black man."[25] This attitude is realized in folk expressions such as "The only thing a Black woman can do for me is to lead me to a white woman" or "I don't haul no coal." Dance suggests that curiosity, proud revenge to finally partake of forbidden fruits, and preference of Eurocentric values of beauty have guided black men's desire for white women. One narrative states:

> This Black guy say, "I'm gon' get me a white woman, a white Cadillac, and a white suit, and ride down the roads o' Georgia in dat car!" The guy say, "Well, you go right ahead—you know wha' I'm go' do. I'm gon' get a black woman, a black Cadillac, a black suit, and ride down them same roads

o' Georgia—and see your black ass hanging."[26]

The relationship between the devaluation of black women and intra-racial prejudice is graphically dramatized in Jungle Fever. Scholar Henry Louis Gates, Jr., states: "Jungle Fever is a film that explores the racial stereotypes and sexual taboos that Western culture . . . has found endlessly fascinating."[27] The scenario centers around Drew, a light-skinned woman, who is married to Flipper, a dark-skinned man. Problems erupt when he has an affair with a white woman. Even though the subject matter was "fascinating," because Jungle Fever addresses intra-racial prejudice and inter-racial love, the film was labeled controversial.

In a confrontation in Bloomingdales, Drew confronts Flipper's prejudicial attitudes, saying, "You've always had a problem with color." Drew understands the ramifications of sexual devaluation based on color prejudice. Even though she is light-skinned, she still is not white. Lee utilizes the theme of inter-racial love, color sensitivity, and crossing social boundaries to demonstrate how myths, taboos, and stereotypes can manipulate self-perception as well as inter-personal interaction.

African American women have been devalued because of physical attributes (skin color, hair texture, size), but they have also been stigmatized because of generalizations regarding their sexuality. Stereotypes concerning black women's insatiable sexual desire have also permeated numerous genres of folklore. In addition, many film characters, from Lydia in The Birth of a Nation (1915) to Dorothy Dandridge in Carmen Jones (1951) to

Pam Grier in Coffee (1973), suggest that black women are sexually promiscuous. The following is an excerpt from the folktale "That Las' Dude":

> This very huge Black woman was washing outside her old shack with a washboard, very scantily clothed. And these three salesmen passing by wanted to know the directions to the town. . . . One of them meddled, "Wonder if we can get a lil' action here." She said, "You kin get all the action you want if you just don't stop me from washing." So the first guy jumped on her back and he proceeded to backskuttle . . . and the second . . . and the third . . . and so finally they shoved the mule up to her and he worked out. And finally they said, "Do we owe you anything?" And she said, "Yeah, the name and address o' that las' dude!"[28]

Folk stereotypes concerning black women's sexuality become the focus of She's Gotta Have It. Nola Darling develops sexual relationships with three men. She then embarks upon a journey to convince others, and perhaps herself, that she is not a freak but a "normal," sexually active young woman (as normal as a sexually active and socially approved young man).

The thematic development of She's Gotta Have It has been analyzed variably from a feminist to a comedic perspective. However, the thematic core of the film examines stereotypes that comment on the sexuality of African American women. As Lee exposes the myth of black women's insatiable sexual appetite, he attempts to show that black women's desires as exemplified in Nola are not perverted. Most importantly, he calls attention to the fact that media and popular culture are not harmless. Many scholars, of course, debate whether Lee's development of this theme dispels stereotypes or actually helps to perpetuate them.

The theme of cultural devaluation as related to the plight of the black male is a prevalent issue in Lee's work. He positions this theme within the street culture from which it emanates. Current studies indicate that "institutional racism and economic marginality have forced Black males to disproportionately experience the ravages of inner city life."[29] Moreover, for many members of the underclass, "alcohol and drugs have traditionally been opiates used to ease the pain of their oppressed status."[30]

In his extensive research on black male populations, folklorist Roger Abrahams underscores the importance of investigating lore within its environmentally specific cultural context. In his two critically acclaimed studies, Deep Down in the Jungle and Talking Black, Abrahams assesses attitudes and behaviors prevalent in black male folk culture. His research, which evaluates their folklore expressions (jokes, toasts, dozens), demonstrates how black male conceptualizations of life inform their folklore performance. Specifically, as artistic, verbal performers, their expressive behavior intricately intertwines and vividly reflects aspects of their economic status and social marginalization.

Social marginalization, however, does not stifle creativity. Whether a preacher or a hustler:

> The artifice of Black communicative behavior is found in its ingenuity . . . and by such role functions as rhetorical leader, preacher, teacher, hustler, and the everyday "rapper." Black communication is truly the consummate art of articulation, and it involves form, performance, and functionality.[51]

Abrahams's research also identifies the black male as "performer." Moreover, the folklore performance embodies his need to maneuver and manipulate. Abrahams posits:

> Viewing life in terms of manipulation can lead to visions of infinite personal creativity, for the world may be shaped to one's own beautiful image, even if this usually occurs in dreams. Each encounter is potentially a manipulative act, and where one expects this kind of game of others and feels it is expected of him, life becomes in a sense a constant performance.[52]

Lee places the black male within a realistic context to examine the pressures that bear upon African American males. In every film Lee incorporates the theme of black male marginalization, directly linking it to the inconsistency in the American creed of equality. Mars (She's Gotta Have It), the inner-city brothers (School Daze), Mookie (Do the Right Thing), Giant (Mo' Better Blues), and Gator (Jungle Fever) are cultural performers, always appearing to be "on stage" as they attempt to manipulate those with whom they come in contact.

The theme of cultural devaluation demonstrates how they are caught within the grips of socially stifling environments. Theirs is a self-perpetuating cycle of poverty, and joblessness, with no focus on self-betterment. They seem to be content with their lives and do very little to improve their condition. These men are characters weighted with symbolic significance representative of black male subcultures. Work, fatherhood, and personal relationships become not opportunities for success but occasions where their individual social inadequacies unfold. Their condition is outlined in their in-group male conversations, which reflect issues that have an impact upon their lives. In each instance, as the character imparts information, he also seeks to entertain, manipulate, and/or impress. Sometimes his oral communication functions as a temporary release from his chaotic reality.

Mookie, a pizza delivery boy and unmarried father, manipulates his girlfriend and sister. Mars uses storytelling to win over Nola, proclaiming, "I saw Jesse Jackson walking down the block. . . . I said, Mr. Jackson, you would make a good president of these United States. A couple of years later he ran. I gave him the idea. It was me. Run, Jesse, run."[33] Giant manipulates Bleek to believe he can manage his career while he can't even manage his gambling obsession. Mars and Giant use boasting to enhance their self-portrait. Their communicative performance gives them a sense of personal power and status.

Perhaps most tragic of the male characters is Gator, who is placed within the context of street/drug culture. Through Gator, audiences understand that for addicts, "drug related behavior and the pursuit of the means necessary to sustain the drug-taking life style become the central life interests and the primary determinants of all social relations."[34] Interestingly, Gator uses "performance" (a little dance) and speech to manipulate his family to support his drug habit. Jungle Fever poignantly dramatizes that membership within drug culture results not only in physical or psychological dislocation but, for Gator, ultimately death.

Intra-racial prejudice, sexism, problems of identity and cultural devaluation are recurrent issues in African American folklore performance. These attitudes and values reflect those found in everyday interactions. These conceptualizations of black life not only permeate folklore performance but also become integral themes in Lee's films. As film refracts everyday reality, it provides the mechanism to discuss not only the film content but also the everyday reality from which the film emerges.

Inter-racial Issues as Themes

Racial intolerance, resistance to racial oppression, and economic exclusion from mainstream opportunities become powerful themes in Lee's films. As with his intra-racial themes, Lee's inter-racial themes draw upon a body of folkloric material. A preliminary examination of this material will clarify the importance of American attitudes toward race and inter-racial relationships.

Numerous genres of folklore performance provide a retrospective and contemporary look at the effects of racism. Music (rap), folk narratives, even jokes detail the horrors of racism. Dance explains:

> Although recently jokes about the white liberals have arisen, the white devil in Black folklore remains the cruel, racist, white Southerner, the harsh slave master, the unfeeling white boss, the brutal, sadistic white sheriff, the unjust white judge, and the ordinary, all-American white Christian who visits all manner of persecution onto his Black brother.[35]

The exploration of the effects of racism in African American folklore is extensive. The following narrative, although humorous, comments on the plight of the "have nots."

> A colored man was sittin' on the bus, and they had chinches in the cars. Say a white man was sittin' there—saw a chinch on the colored man's shoulder—so he walked up there and took 'im off. He [colored man] say, "Looka here! Looka Here! Yawl white folks don't wan' to see a nigger have nothin'. Put 'im back up there!"[36]

There is a real frustration with "not havin' nothin'." African American folklore captures not only the economic impact of racism but also the violence that accompanies the struggle for freedom. The following narrative, "The Suicide," communicates the penetrating effects of racism and the consequence of resistance to oppression.

> A Negro was pulled from a river in Mississippi. He had five stab wounds and two gunshot wounds in his head and chest.

> In addition, his feet had been set in concrete and his hands were tied. The sheriff called a Civil Rights leader and told him it was the worst case of suicide he'd ever seen.[37]

Some narratives warn protesters that liberation comes at a steep cost. Even so, narratives of resistance to oppression are an integral component of African American history and folklore.

In the chapter "Tales about the Cruelty of Whites," Dance discusses personal narratives that recount the deplorable treatment inflicted on black men by white men. More than just historical accounts, these narratives also function as a means of psychological relief from the obvious pain of prejudice. Dance comments on a group of black men in their seventies and eighties who recounted tales:

> They laughed uproariously at the end of the anecdote, and then they started talking about their own experiences with similar cruel bosses. . . . For one brief moment I saw in their faces the suffering of my people, I felt the magnitude of a pain so deep that none of them could ever have verbalized it.[38]

As has been indicated above, the primary agent of inter-racial conflict that has had diverse and prolonged effects on the status of African Americans is racism. School Daze, Do the Right Thing, Mo' Better Blues, and Jungle Fever demonstrate that racism is not an abstract attitude of hatred against nonwhites but a philosophy of racial superiority imposed and legitimized by economic power. In 1903, the eminent black scholar W.E.B. DuBois wrote: "The problem of the twentieth century is the problem of the color line."[39] This premonitory statement is as relevant now as it was in the early 1900s. Even if the ramifications of racism are less blatant today, they are no less damaging.

The struggle for economic and social justice continues to be a priority for African Americans. Persistent denial of economic opportunity has further intensified the schism between the "haves" and the "have nots." Researchers acknowledge that "The 1980s ended as a decade during which progress towards racial equality in economic life for black Americans as a group came to a grinding halt."[40] As racial inequality in economic life persists, the decay of the black community ensues, demonstrating that the effects of racism are quite pervasive.

In economic terms, then, the problem of the twenty-first century may well be the problem of the glass ceiling. Black Americans of all classes may perceive the possibility of a higher level of economic well-being, but access to that higher level is generally blocked by racist barriers. A look at economic opportunity through the glass ceiling too often discourages initiative and devalues accomplishment.

This common experience of black Americans in the workplace is used by Lee to fashion a motif of economic frustration. Mookie, the delivery boy in Do the Right Thing, is unlikely ever to become the proprietor of a pizzeria or even to share in the management of the one where he works. Flipper, the talented and productive architect in Jungle Fever, is denied the promotion that he believes his work merits. Much of the subsequent plot flows from the initial confrontation between Flipper with his white bosses:

Flipper
My contributions to this company's success speak for themselves. I've worked very hard, put in some very long hours.

Boss
We know that; we both know that.

Flipper
And now it is time for a vertical move. I've moved as lateral as I can go. The only fair thing to do is to accept me into the position as partner. I'm not making any demands.

Boss
You're not making any demands?

Flipper
I'm due. I deserve this. I'm the next one in line and besides you promised. . . .

Boss
I understand how anxious you are and how patient you've been. We can't do this now!

Flipper
Well, that really disappoints me. Ah . . . I can see you have no respect for me or my contributions to this company, so you force me to turn in my letter of resignation. I see

> I have no future here at Mast and Covingdon.[41]

No matter how talented an architect Flipper may be and no matter how much his productivity has contributed to the success of the business, he is barred from joining the upper echelons of the firm.

The theme of economic racism is also present in Mo' Better Blues. This film challenges institutional racism by suggesting that whites have historically controlled, and perhaps still do control, the major production and distribution of black music. This form of economic racism has historical validity. Jazz scholar Frank Kofsky acknowledges:

> With very minor exceptions, it is whites who do own the major economic institutions of the jazz world—the booking agencies, recording companies, nightclubs, festivals, magazines, radio stations, etc. Blacks own nothing but their own talent.[42]

In one key scene in Mo' Better Blues, Bleek confronts Moe and Josh, the white nightclub owners, to ask for a pay increase.

> Bleek
> I'm not happy at all. I came here to speak about the great sums of money you two are making off my music and the little I see in return.

Moe
You are mistaken, cuz you're talking 'bout management. Giant, your manager, was the one who negotiated this deal. One you agreed to. . . .

Bleek
I trust him. He's honest. I can't say that about you, Moe, or your first-class cousin.

Moe
Nobody can be trusted. Everybody steals. Everyone is crooked. The trick is to walk out of the deal with as much of your shirt on as possible.

Bleek
Y'know what that sounds like? Like the long, long history of Black artists being exploited.[43]

Lee then juxtaposes the economic rape of black music with emerging African American attitudes of apathy and ignorance regarding the importance of jazz. In an intense moment, Bleek vents his frustration and remarks to Shadow:

> I'm convinced Black folks are ignorant. We just plain are. I'm sick and tired of playing before everybody but my own people. They don't come out. We don't support our own. If Black artists, if I had to rely on niggers to eat, I'd starve to death. Jazz is our music, > but we don't support it. It's sad, but true.[44]

Lee's message is echoed in a recent article on jazz by Levine. He charges that American society has not only neglected jazz but has also "pigeonholed it, stereotyped it, denigrated it, and distorted its meaning and its character."[45] Levine then challenges Americans "to make that empathetic leap and allow ourselves to see jazz as an integral vibrant part of American culture throughout this century. . . ."[46] While Levine addresses all Americans, Lee is especially concerned about the attitudes of African Americans. If white institutions control the production and distribution of jazz, and African Americans do not support it, the musician is placed in a precarious situation.

The theme of African American ignorance and apathy is also present in School Daze, where Lee addresses the issue of apartheid in South Africa. Some students are concerned but completely unaware of the condition of blacks in South Africa. Others are totally unconcerned because they have different priorities. Dap questions the student body, asking, "How is it those schools [Columbia, Harvard, Yale] that I mentioned have divested their money in South Africa and we backward Negroes here . . . are holding on to it like a wino who clutches his last bottle?"[47] Julian, a fraternity leader, retorts: "We don't approve of this African mumbo jumbo and we're here to let you know about it."[48] The stage is set for the two diametrically opposing views. By labeling the student body "backward Negroes," Lee questions black racial consciousness. He also draws attention to the plight of black South Africans, suggesting that African diasporic issues should concern everyone. Throughout the film, Dap challenges the student body "to wake up." Lee's message becomes a call for political awareness as the first step toward social maturation.

Themes of racial and economic oppression run throughout many of Lee's films. Do the Right Thing, however, is the film that most effectively communicates to the audience the explosive potential of racial conflict. Lee declares that the idea for Do the Right Thing grew out of the Howard Beach incident.[49] But he was also interested in the black underclass and the effects of economic marginalization. Lee explains:

> Do the Right Thing was not about Black people in three-piece suits going to work; it was about the black underclass in Bed-Stuy, a community that has some of the highest unemployment, infant mortality, and drug-related homicide in New York City. We're talking about people who live in the bowels of the socio-economic system, but live with dignity and humor.[50]

The scenario examines one hot day in a Bed-Stuy neighborhood. Ironically, even though the community is predominantly black, the local businesses are not black-owned. The vegetable market is operated by Koreans, and the primary setting, Sal's Famous Italian Pizzeria, is operated by Italian Americans. Tensions erupt after Buggin' Out and Radio Raheem demand that Sal place photos of prominent black leaders on his "Wall of Fame," rather than only photos of famous Italians and Italian Americans.

The conflict in Do the Right Thing is more deeply seated than the question of whose pictures will appear on the wall. Lee exposes and juxtaposes the structures of economic and social injustice. Does Sal, who has worked hard to build a business, have the right to place only his Italian heroes on the wall? What are the rights of the black patrons who spend their hard-earned money at Sal's pizzeria? Where are the black-owned businesses in the community? Who is being exploited? Who is oppressed? Ultimately, what is the right thing to do?

The personal becomes the political as the themes of racism and economic marginalization develop. By exposing questions that have only controversial and contentious answers, Lee examines the status quo with unflinching frankness. His audience is forced to see, to feel, to think. Through his craft as a storyteller, Lee breaks down the wall between filmmaker and spectator, between the world of art and the world of everyday reality. Once again, he draws the audience into an experience of action-participation in what is or what may be.

The theme of inter-racial love relationships appears in several of Lee's films. Sometimes it is a minor motif and sometimes it is the fulcrum of the plot for the entire film. The tension of black/white relationships operates as an undercurrent in Do the Right Thing. Mookie, the delivery boy, is incensed when he sees Sal, his boss, making advances to his sister Jade. Mookie confronts his sister and orders her not to see Sal. This theme also appears as a major and a minor element in Jungle Fever. As a minor element it involves the relationship between Paulie and Lucinda; however, the film focuses on the relationship between Angie and Flipper.

Jungle Fever poignantly examines racism within the familial and communal context. Lee dramatizes how racist attitudes can potentially erode interpersonal interactions. The film suggests that racism is not instinctual, but taught. Most importantly, Jungle Fever not only examines aggression between the races but also dramatizes the conflict of whites against each other as it functions to drive a wedge between Angie and her father and Paulie and his father.

In one of the most emotionally compelling scenes, Angie's father finds out she is sleeping with a black man. As he beats her mercilessly, he repeatedly screams, "I didn't raise you to go out with niggers!" After Angie's brothers pull him off her, he orders her out of the house.

Lee contrasts the effects of racism in the Italian household with the racial hatred displayed by Flipper's father when Flipper brings Angie to dinner. The Good Reverend Doctor Purify delivers an eloquent but searing statement recounting the horrors of white exploitation and cruelty. He then refuses to eat dinner with Angie and, referring to her as a whore, stalks out of the room. As in other Lee films, the personal becomes political, the familial becomes political, community interactions become political. Jungle Fever demonstrates that the family unit undergirds the community structure. Lee simply asks: "If both the familial and the communal succumb to racism and become dysfunctional, how will society move forward?"

In contrast to the realism of inter-racial conflict in Lee's films, the treatment of race relations in mainstream American cinema has generally avoided portraying the tensions and consequences of racial prejudice. Black film historian Donald Bogle summarizes the decade of the eighties, stating:

> The subtext of many Reagan era movies was that all was fine and dandy between the races, that racism had vanished, and that significant cultural distinctions and differences could be glossed over because they were just about nonexistent.[51]

While a probing examination of American racism is lacking in white mainstream historical and literary accounts, African American folklore traditions, oral histories, and films by Lee and other independent filmmakers have provided realistic commentary on race relations in America.

Conclusion

This paper defines Spike Lee as a cultural storyteller whose dramatic themes are derived from the lives of ordinary African Americans. As such, his films transmit cultural knowledge and stimulate political thought about what it means to be black in America. In particular, Lee's thematizations of black folklore represent a journey through the diverse quarters of everyday African American life experiences. Consequently, there is nothing "devastatingly original" in Spike Lee's films. He consciously and subconsciously manipulates distinctive themes found within cultural history and folklore performance. In addition, Lee's films, like other creative cultural expressions, employ an antiphonal structure that encourages introspection, dialogue, and perhaps political activism.

Undeniably, a dynamic interplay exists between Lee's cinematic themes and the documented themes prevalent in African American folklore and cultural history. These thematic commonalities represent observable and analyzable continuities. As scholars continue to develop means by which to analyze African American film, clearly cultural history, folk themes, and structures will emerge as key elements of the analysis. Much work needs to be done. Future research must continue to document how the use of African American folklore and cultural history function to signature the work of black filmmakers.[52]

Notes

I wish to extend my gratitude to Dr. William Wiggins, Jr., for his ever-present encouragement and for reading an early draft of this paper. I am deeply indebted to Dr. Herman Hudson for stimulating discussion of this material and for his editorial and research suggestions. Research for this article, in part, was supported by a grant awarded to the Department of Afro-American Studies (Indiana University) by the Ford Foundation.

1. In the 1980s two dissertations were written through the folklore department (Indiana University) that address the relationship between African American cinema, folklore, and cultural history: Adrienne Seward, "Early Black Film and Folk Tradition: An Interpretive Analysis of the Use of Folklore in Selected All Black Cast Feature Films" (1985), and Gloria Gibson-Hudson, "The Cultural Significance of Music to the Black Independent Filmmaker" (1987).

2. Todd Boyd, "The Meaning of the Blues," Wide Angle: A Quarterly Journal of Film History, Theory, Criticism & Practice 13:3 & 4 (July-October 1991): 59.

3. Lee's films are multi-thematic. Only select clips that illustrate the concept presented will be discussed. Future studies may provide more in-depth consideration to the relationship between film, folklore, and cultural history, not only in regard to theme but also in regard to filmic structure and aesthetics.

4. Houston A. Baker, Jr., "Spike Lee and the Commerce of Culture," Black American Literature Forum 25:2 (Summer 1991): 251.

5. Baker 252.

6. Daryl Cumber Dance, Shuckin' and Jivin': Folklore from Contemporary Black Americans (Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978) xvii.

7. H. Nigel Thomas, From Folklore to Fiction: A Study of Folk Heroes and Rituals in the Black American Novel (New York: Greenwood Press, 1988) 11-12.

8. Simon Bronner, American Folklore Studies (Lawrence: University Press of Kansas, 1986) 129.

9. Daryl Cumber Dance, "Learn It to the Younguns: Passing on Folk Wisdom," in H. Nigel Thomas, From Folklore to Fiction xi.

10. Mellonee V. Burnim and Portia K. Maultsby, "From Backwoods to City Streets: The Afro-American Musical Journey," in Geneva Gay and Willie L. Baber, eds.,

Expressively Black: The Cultural Basis of Ethnic Identity (New York: Praeger Publishers, 1987) 111. See also a recent article by William Wiggins, Jr., entitled "Pilgrims, Crosses, and Faith: The Folk Dimensions of Heaven Bound," Black American Literature Forum 25 (Spring 1991): 93-101, which analyzes folk elements in the drama.

11. Future studies may also want to consider the cinematic objective of consciousness-raising in African American film and how this objective corresponds to film and/or folk expression within the African diaspora. Interestingly, Roger Abrahams notes in regard to African folktales, "[they] often end with 'a message,'a truth to remember as one confronts life's problems. . . they embody the inherited wisdom—social, personal, and moral—of the people whose world we see through the filter of folklore." African Folktales: Traditional Stories of the Black World xvi.

12. Geneva Gay and Willie Baber 350.

13. Dance, Shuckin' and Jivin' 77-78.

14. Lawrence Levine, Black Culture and Black Consciousness (New York: Oxford University Press, 1977) 287.

15. Levine 285.

16. Alan P. Merriam, The Anthropology of Music (Chicago: Northwestern University Press, 1964) 278.

17. Merriam 208. See also Portia Maultsby's article "Soul Music: Its Sociological and Political Significance in American Popular Culture" Journal of Popular Culture 17 (Fall 1983): 51-60, which draws a direct correlation between song texts and black nationalism of the sixties.

18. Levine 285. See also discussion of self-fulfilling prophecy in Richard T. Schaeffer's Racial and Ethnic Groups. His discussion entails an analysis of how individuals respond to stereotypes. In certain situations, individuals "respond to stereotypes and act on them, with the result that false definitions become accurate" (23).

19. Lee's work is generally considered "controversial." However, issues such as intra-racial prejudice have always been considered "controversial" within African American culture. One of the primary reasons his work may be viewed as "highly" controversial is because the medium of film is more expansive, reaching mass audiences, whereas other forms of folk expression are more localized and remain strictly "in-group." Overt expression to mainstream America is viewed by many African Americans as disturbing, threatening, and in some cases as a violation of cultural taboos.

20. Toni Cade Bambara, "Programming with School Daze." In Spike Lee and David Lee, The Films of Spike Lee: Five for Five (New York: Stewart, Tabori & Chang, 1991) 47.

21. Spike Lee and Lisa Jones, Uplift the Race: The Construction of School Daze (New York: Simon & Schuster, 1988) 155.

22. Barre Toelken, The Dynamics of Folklore (Boston: Houghton, Mifflin & Company, 1979) 246.

23. For in-depth discussion of interactive, antiphonal response within African American cultural expression see Burnim and Maultsby, "From the Backwoods to City Streets: The Afro-American Musical Journey," and Ceola Ross Baber, "The Artistry and Artifice of Black Communication," both in Expressively Black.

24. bell hooks, Ain't I A Woman? Black Women and Feminism (Boston: South End Press, 1981) 22.

25. Dance, Shuckin' and Jivin' 101.

26. Dance, Shuckin' and Jivin' 107-108.

27. Henry Louis Gates, Jr., "Jungle Fever; or, Guess Who's Not Coming to Dinner?" In Spike Lee and David Lee, The Films of Spike Lee: Five for Five, 164.

28. Dance, Shuckin' and Jivin' 114.

29. Robert Staples, "Substance Abuse and the Black Family Crisis: An Overview," The Western Journal of Black Studies 14 (1990): 198.

30. Staples 203.

31. Ceola Ross Baber 76.

32. Roger Abrahams, Deep Down in the Jungle: Negro Narrative Folklore from the Streets of Philadelphia (Chicago: Aldine Publishing Company, 1970) 33.

33. Spike Lee, Spike Lee's Gotta Have It: Inside Guerrilla Filmmaking (New York: Simon & Schuster, Inc., 1987) 327.

34. Staples 199.

35. Dance, Shuckin' and Jivin', 165.

36. Dance, Shuckin' and Jivin' 176.

37. Dance, Shuckin' and Jivin' 173.

38. Dance, Shuckin' and Jivin' 166.

39. W.E.B. DuBois, The Souls of Black Folk (Chicago: A. C. McClurg & Co., 1903) 78.

40. David H. Swinton, "The Economic Status of Black Americans During the 1980s: A Decade of Limited Progress," The State of Black America: 1990 (New York: National Urban League, Inc., 1990) 25.

41. Taken from the soundtrack of Jungle Fever.

42. Frank Kofsky, Black Nationalism and the Revolution in Music (New York: Pathfinder Press, Inc., 1970) 12.

43. Spike Lee and Lisa Jones, Mo' Better Blues 250.

44. Lee, Mo Better Blues 262.

45. Lawrence Levine, "Jazz and American Culture," Journal of American Folklore 102 (Jan.-March 1989): 6.

46. Lawrence Levine, "Jazz and American Culture" 20.

47. Spike Lee, Uplift the Race 187.

48. Spike Lee, Uplift the Race 190.

49. The Howard Beach Incident occurred in December 1986. The twenty-three-year-old black victim, Michael Griffith, was beaten and chased by a white gang. Griffith died when he ran out into the street and was struck by an oncoming car.

50. Spike Lee with Lisa Jones, Do the Right Thing (New York: Simon & Schuster, Inc., 1989) 109.

51. Donald Bogle, "The New Black Cinema," Spin Magazine (Oct. 1990): 45.

52. Spencer William's The Blood of Jesus, Charles Burnett's To Sleep with Anger, and Julie Dash's Daughters of the Dust represent just a few films that are steeped in cultural history, folk music, and numerous dimensions of folklore.

Photo: Hakim Rahsul

Grace Jackson-Brown is Branch Head Librarian of the Black Culture Center Library, Indiana University. She is also a reference librarian and Afro-American Studies subject specialist on the Indiana University campus. Grace Jackson-Brown holds a Master of Library Science degree from Emporia State University, School of Library and Information Management, in Emporia, Kansas, and a Bachelor of Arts degree in English/journalism from the University of Missouri in Kansas City. She has previously served as head of the circulation and reserve department of King Library, Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, and as assistant to the director of the Women's Center at Emporia State University.

Bibliography on Spike Lee (Shelton Jackson Lee, 1957-) African American Filmmaker

Grace Jackson Brown

Introduction

Compilation for the "Bibliography on Spike Lee (Shelton Jackson Lee, 1957-)" began in late 1990. At the request of Dr. Herman Hudson, Dean for the Office of Afro-American Affairs, the "Bibliography on Spike Lee" was initiated by Wilmer Baatz, who served as the Indiana University Black Culture Center librarian for more than nineteen years. Mr. Baatz had compiled similar bibliographies in the subject area of Afro-American Studies. Mr. Baatz died on February 21, 1991, before completing the "Bibliography on Spike Lee." He is missed by his friends and colleagues and the generations of Indiana University students whom he served for many years. The bibliography has been updated through 1991. I would like to thank Jeffrey Graf, reference computing coordinator at Indiana University Main Library, for providing research assistance for the bibliography.

The "Bibliography on Spike Lee" documents the abundance of literature that was published on Spike Lee and his films during the extraordinary rise of his career as a filmmaker, especially during the five years from 1986 through 1991. A survey of periodical literature was conducted from 1980 through 1991. Only a few reviews and articles about Lee's work were published in the early eighties. Most of the citations in this publication date from the last five years of this period, during which time Lee directed five major films dealing with the African American cultural experience.

This compilation is intended to serve as a comprehensive guide to literature that will assist students and scholarly researchers with an interest in Spike Lee as director, actor, and entrepreneur. As the literature will attest, Lee's films have received acclaim among film critics and have been financial successes. However, Lee and his films are surrounded by controversy.

The "Bibliography on Spike Lee" encompasses the scholarly and popular literature that has been published on the filmmaker and his work. It includes newspaper articles, journal and magazine articles, and chapters or sections of books. By including academic and popular journalistic forms of film commentary, this bibliography aims at a middle ground, incorporating both wide-circulation periodicals and academic journals. The format of the bibliography is in accordance with the Modern Language Association (MLA) bibliographic style.

The bibliography is divided into six broad subject areas: "Biography," "Interviews," "Production and Direction," "Books and Book Reviews," "Film Criticism and Reviews," and "Entrepreneurship and Conduct of Life." The biography section includes factual and interpretive accounts of Spike Lee's life. Biographical reference books that contain information about Lee are included in the biography section. In the interview section are found citations of interviews with Lee (with the exception of a citation to an interview with prominent scholars and other professionals that discusses the portrayal of racism and violence in Lee's films). The production/direction category contains citations to literature that discusses Lee's career as filmmaker and his place within the recent emergence of African American directors in the Hollywood film industry. The books and book reviews section includes references to books that Lee has written or edited, in whole or in part, and reviews of those books. The film criticism and reviews section includes criticism and reviews of the seven films that Lee has directed, including the film on the life of Malcolm X, which was in production at the time of the publication of this bibliography. The entrepreneurship and conduct of life section covers references to literature about Lee's philanthropic, business, and sociopolitical activities. Bibliographic citations referenced in this work were reviewed or checked within several indices for accuracy by the compiler.

The following periodical indices for the years 1980 through 1991 were consulted in compiling the bibliography:

ABI/Inform
Alternative Press Index
Art Index
Arts and Humanities Citation Index
Bibliographic Guide to Black Studies
Biography Index
Black Newspaper Index
Book Review Index
Books in Print
Business Periodicals Index
DataTimes
Film Review Annual Humanities Index
Index to Black Periodicals
InfoTrac Expanded Academic Index
InfoTrac National Newspaper Index
Left Index
Modern Language Association Bibliography
Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature
Religion Index

Biography

Campbell, Dick. "Spike Lee Is Genius Who Was Born at Right Time with the Right Talent." Amsterdam News [New York] 15 July 1989: 27.

Canby, Vincent. "Putting Spike Lee in Retrospect." New York Times 28 Jan. 1990, natl. ed.: 32H.

Champlin, Charles. "Spike Gets Personal." Los Angeles Times 29 July 1990, Calendar sec.: 4+.

Christensen, Jerome. "Spike Lee, Corporate Populist." Critical Inquiry 17 (1991): 582-95.

Contemporary Theatre, Film and Television. Ed. Linda S. Hubbard and Owen O'Donnell. 9 vols. Detroit: Gale Research, 1989.

Current Biography Yearbook, 1989. Ed. Charles Moritz. New York: H. W. Wilson, 1989.

Davis, Thulani. "Local Hero: Workin' 40 Acres And a Mule In East Brooklyn." American Film July-Aug. 1989: 26-27.

Dickey, Christopher, with Peter McKillop. "That's The Truth, Ruth: Film Director-Producer-Actor Spike Lee." Newsweek 3 July 1989: 66.

Fiske, L. U., Jr. "Questioning Spike Lee." Christian Science Monitor 17 July 1989: 18.

Frechette, David. "Spike Lee's Declaration of Independence." Black Enterprise Dec. 1986: 56-58+.

Grimm, Matthew. "The Rebel As Hero, As Auteur, As Crossover Marketer." Adweek's Marketing Week 16 July 1990: 4-5.

Harrington, Walt. "What Makes Spike Lee Different." Washington Post Magazine 2 June 1991: 10-15+.

Hasson, Bill. "Jazz On Location: Filmmaker Spike Lee." Jazz Times Jan. 1990: 16-17.

"He's Gotta Have It: Director Spike Lee Reaches for Fame as a Great Filmmaker." Ebony Jan. 1987: 42+.

"Hitting the Hot Button: Spike Lee: Artist Who Best Captured the Ethnic Experience in America." U.S. News & World Report 9 July 1990: 52.

Johnson, Pamela. "Showstopper Spike Lee." Essence Sept. 1986: 29.

Johnson, Pamela. "The Powers That Be." Black Enterprise Aug. 1990: 123-24+.

Jones, Marsha. "Fast Forward: The Reel Side of Spike Lee." About. . . Time July 1990: 6-7.

Kempley, Rita. "Spike Lee, Mastering the Havoc." Washington Post 22 Oct. 1987: C1+.

Kirn, Walter. "Spike It Already!" Gentlemen's Quarterly Aug. 1990: 92+.

Landler, Mark. "Spike Lee Does a Lot of Things Right." Business Week 6 Aug. 1990: 62-63.

Lee, Spike. "To Be Black, In Vogue." Harper's Magazine March 1989: 22+.

Lesinski, Jeanne M. "Spike Lee." Newsmakers '88: The People Behind Today's Headlines. Ed. Peter M. Gareffa. Detroit: Gale Research, 1989.

Little, Benilde. "Brooklyn's Baby Mogul, Spike Lee, Finds the Freedom He's Gotta Have." People Weekly 13 Oct. 1986: 67+.

McDowell, Jeanne. "He's Got To Have It His Way." Time 17 July 1989: 92-94.

Mieher, Stuart. "Spike Lee's Gotta Have It." New York Times Magazine 9 Aug. 1987: 26-29+.

Morrison, Micah. "The World According to Spike Lee." National Review 4 Aug. 1989: 24-25.

Noah, Timothy. "Rich But Dumb." New Republic 25 Dec. 1989: 46.

Norment, Lynn. "Spike Lee: The Man Behind the Movies and the Controversy." Ebony Oct. 1989: 140+.

Orenstein, Peggy. "Spike's Riot: Filmmaker Spike Lee Is On A Razor's Edge: Will His Militant Message Cut It In Hollywood?" Mother Jones Sept. 1989: 32-35+.

Pond, Steve. "Spike, Doing the Shrewd Thing." Washington Post 13 July 1990, Style sec.: C7.

Relin, David Oliver and Tom Beller. "Uplifting His Race." Scholastic Update 7 Apr. 1989: 27.

Rios, Alejandro. "Spike Lee: Hacer Lo Correcto." Gaceta De Cuba Mar. 1990: 6-7.

Robb, David. "'Right Thing.'" Variety 15 Nov. 1989: 2.

"Shelton 'Spike' Lee." Congressional Record 25 Sept. 1989: E3153.

"Spike Lee: The Man Behind The Movies and The Controversy." Black Enterprise July 1989: 36-38+.

Stone, Les. "Lee, Shelton Jackson, 1957(?)- [Spike Lee]." Contemporary Authors. Ed. Hal May and Susan M. Trosky. Detroit: Gale Research, 1989.

Tate, Greg. "Close-up: Spike Lee." American Film Sept. 1986: 48-49.

"20 People to Watch in 1989." Ebony Jan. 1989: 27+.

"The 25 Most Intriguing People of the Year." People Weekly 25 Dec. 1989 - 1 Jan. 1990: 78-79.

"Waking Up Rich and Famous: Five Young Celebrities Tell How They Cope With Overnight Success." Ebony Sept. 1987: 36+.

Warren, Larkin. "Spike Lee: Filmmaker." Esquire Dec. 1989: 102.

"A Weapon Against Racism." Michigan Chronicle [Detroit] 6 Dec. 1986: A6.

Whitaker, Charles. "Doing The Spike Thing." Ebony Nov. 1991: 82+.

Who's Who Among Black Americans, 5th ed., 1988.

Who's Who in America, 46th ed., 1990.

Interviews

Allen, Bonnie. "The Making of School Daze: Talking With Spike." Essence Feb. 1988: 50+.

Breskin, David. "Spike Lee: The Rolling Stone Interview." Rolling Stone 11 July 1991: 63-64+.

Brock, Pope. "Spike Lee Does His Thing." Rolling Stone 1 Dec. 1988: 31-32.

Glicksman, Marlaine. "Lee Way." Film Comment Sept./Oct. 1986: 46-49.

Glicksman, Marlaine. "Spike Lee's Bed-Stuy BBQ." Film Comment July/Aug. 1989: 12-16+.

Glicksman, Marlaine. "Whoopi's Blue Eyes." Harper's Jan. 1987: 29.

Hamill, Pete. "Spike Lee Takes No Prisoners." Esquire Aug. 1991: 24-26.

Holsey, Steve. "Filmmaker Has No Apologies For Telling The Truth." Michigan Chronicle [Detroit] 20 Feb. 1988: B1-B2.

James, Caryn. "Naked For the World to See." New York Times Book Review 13 Dec. 1987: 14.

Katsahnias, Iannis, and Nicolas Saada. "A Propos de Do The Right Thing." Cahiers du Cinema June 1989: 9-11.

Lee, Spike. "Spike to Spike, The Filmmaker Interviews Himself." Essence July 1989: 55-56.

Lee, Spike, with Trudy S. Moore. "The EM Interview: Doing the 'Right Thing' In Film." Ebony Man (EM) July 1989: 17-19.

Margolin, François. "Spike Lee In 15 Questions." Cahiers du Cinema June 1986, Le Journales sec.: vi.

Moore, Trudy S. "Spike Lee: Producer, Director, Star Discusses Making of Film She's Gotta Have It." Jet 10 Nov. 1986: 54-56.

Schmidt, Mary (New York City Cultural Affairs Commissioner), Henry Louis Gates, Jr. (Cornell University), Dr. Alvin Poussaint (Harvard Medical School), Judge Burton B. Roberts, screenwriter Paul Schrader, and Betty Shabazz (City University). Interview. "'Do The Right Thing': Issues and Images." New York Times 9 July 1989, sec. B: 1.

Smith, Vern E. "Fact Is, Spike Lee's A Romantic At Heart." Newsweek 10 June 1991: 46.

"Spike Lee Interviewed About She's Gotta Have It." Afro-American [Baltimore, MD] 25 Oct. 1986: 2+.

"Spike Lee Interviewed About She's Gotta Have It." Call & Post [Cleveland, OH] 30 Oct. 1986: A15.

Van Gelder, Lawrence. "Spike Lee's Plans." New York Times 15 Mar. 1991, natl. ed.: B4.

Wity, Susan. "Spike Lee, 'The Instigator.'" Life Spring 1988: 100.

Production and Direction

Ansen, David. "The 'Vision' Thing." Newsweek 2 Oct. 1989: 37.

Baker, Houston A., Jr. "Spike Lee and The Commerce of Culture." Black American Literature Forum 25 (1991): 237-52.

Bernstein, Richard. "The Arts Catch Up With a Society in Disarray: America's 'New Tribalism' Is Producing a Climate of Cultural Combat." New York Times 2 Sept. 1990, natl. ed., sec. 2: H1.

Bourne, St. Clair. "The African American Image in American Cinema." Black Scholar Mar. 1990: 12-19.

Calloway, Earl. "African Americans Making Modern Movies." Chicago Defender 1 Nov. 1989, daily ed., Entertainment sec.: 21.

Collier, Aldore. "Film: Afro-American Filmmakers Growing In Number and Stature." Ebony Aug. 1991: 54-55.

Collier, Aldore. "Fighting the Power in Hollywood." Ebony Aug. 1990: 106+.

Collier, Aldore. "Spike Lee: Playing Hollywood Hardball." Ebony Man (EM) Nov. 1989: 79-80+.

Corliss, Richard. "Boyz of New Black City: Spike Lee's Jungle Fever Heads a Wave of Films That Convey the Harsh Truths of Ghetto Rage and Anguish." Time 17 June 1991: 64+.

Cripps, Thomas. "Film." Split Image: African Americans in the Mass Media. Ed. Janette L. Dates and William Barlow. Washington, D.C.: Howard University Press, 1990. 166-67.

De Witt, Karen. "Police Investigating Bias in Vandalism Linked to Lee Film." New York Times 22 Sept. 1990: 26.

Greenberg, James. "In Hollywood, Black Is In: Black Film Makers Are Being Welcomed As Never Before By Studios That Recognize Their Moneymaking Potential." New York Times 4 Mar. 1990, natl. ed., sec. 2: H1+.

Harrell, Al. "Variations on the Mo' Better Blues." American Cinematographer Sept. 1990: 42-44+.

"Hollywood Shuffle." The Economist 30 Mar. 1991: 87.

Johnson, Albert. "Mood Indigo: A Long View." Film Quarterly 44 (1991): 15-29.

Johnson, Pamela. "They've Gotta Have It." Black Enterprise July 1989: 36-44.

Jones, J. "Lee and Black Film 'Boom.'" In These Times 26 June 1991: 21.

Kelly, Ernece B. "Harlem Blues." The Crisis Aug./Sept. 1991: 6-7.

Konik, Michael. "Soul of Independence." Reason Nov. 1987: 48+.

Lehman, Susan. "Who Will Be The Next Spike Lee?" Gentlemen's Quarterly Feb. 1991: 69-70+.

Leland, John. "New Jack Cinema Enters Screaming." Newsweek 10 June 1991: 50+.

Lubiano, Wahneema. "But Compared To What? Reading Realism, Representation, and Essentialism in School Daze, Do The Right Thing, and the Spike Lee Discourse." Black American Literature Forum 25 (1991): 253-80.

McRoberts, Flynn. "Reluctant Savior: Spike Lee Lays It Out: Minority Obstacles Invite No Easy Answers." Chicago Tribune 12 Apr. 1990, daily ed., Tempo sec.: 3.

Magiera, Marcy. "Lee: Black Films Get Less Support." Advertising Age 1 Apr. 1991: 38.

Malveaux, Julianne. "Spike's Spite--Women at the Periphery." Ms. Sept./Oct. 1991: 78-80.

Martin, Louis. "Some Good News." Chicago Defender 22 July 1989, Big Weekend ed.: 18.

Maslin, Janet. "From Hits to Misses, But Why?" New York Times 28 Feb. 1988, natl. ed., sec. 2: H23+.

Milloy, Courtland. "Waking Up to Freedom." Washington Post 4 July 1989: B3.

Milloy, Courtland. "The Message of Spike Lee's 'Messenger.'" Washington Post 13 June 1991: C3.

Mitchell, W.J.T. "The Violence of Public Art: Do The Right Thing." Critical Inquiry 16 (1990): 880-99.

Nicholson, David. "Why Can't We Give Black Cinema a Chance?" Washington Post 30 Aug. 1987: C1+.

Perkins, Eric. "Renewing the African American Cinema: The Films of Spike Lee." Cineaste 17.4 (1990): 4-8.

Pines, Jim. "Hollywood Shuffle and 'Black' Filmmakers." New Statesman 8 Apr. 1988: 29-30.

"Rebel Filmmakers." Rolling Stone 14 Dec. 1989-28 Dec. 1989: 113.

Reynaud, Berenice. "Great Black Music." Cahiers du Cinema Jan. 1990: 8.

Richardson, Charles V. "Blaxploitation, Phase Two." American Vision Apr. 1991: 44-45.

Ross, Andrew. "Ballots, Bullets, or Batmen: Can Cultural Studies Do The Right Thing?" Screen 31 (1990): 26-44.

Salamon, Julie. "On Film: High Notes and High Jinks." Wall Street Journal 18 Feb. 1988, western ed.: 20.

Schulman, Arlene. "True Fighters." New York Times 1 Jan. 1990, natl. ed.: 30.

Schwartz, Maralee, and Lloyd Grove. "Spike Lee's Jackson Spot." Washington Post 17 Apr. 1988: A16.

"Scorses Directs PSAs for Della Femina McNamee." Back Stage Shoot 10 Aug. 1990: 6+.

Sharkey, Betsy. "Knocking on Hollywood's Door: Black Filmmakers Like Spike Lee Struggle To See and Be Seen." American Film July/Aug. 1989: 22-27+.

Sinclair, Abiola. "BFF [Black Filmmakers Foundation] Gala Bash Smashing Success." Amsterdam News [New York] 10 June 1989: 32.

Singleton, John. "Coolin' With Spike." Essence Nov. 1991: 64-65+.

"Spike Lee Filming Banned at Alma Mater in Atlanta." Jet 11 May 1987: 55.

Stanton, Ali. "Spike Offers Filmmaking Seminars at LI [Long Island] University." Amsterdam News [New York] 25 Feb. 1989: 23.

Sterritt, David. "Blacks In The Mainstream." Christian Science Monitor 2 July 1990: 13.

Van Gelder, Lawrence. "Advertising Arguments." New York Times 12 Feb. 1988, natl. ed.: 18.

Van Gelder, Lawrence. "From Spike Lee, Some 'Variations.'" New York Times 24 Nov. 1989, natl. ed.: Living Arts Pages sec.: C10.

Wallace, Michele. "Invisibility Blues: Doing the Real Thing." Artforum Oct. 1989: 20-22.

White, Armond. "Flipper Purify and Furious Styles." Sight and Sound Aug. 1991: 8-12.

Wood, Joe. "Spike Lee Among the Tribes." Christianity and Crisis 11 Sept. 1989: 255-56.

Worrill, Conrad W. "Black Films Slowly Emerging." Chicago Defender 5 Apr. 1988, daily ed.: 10.

"Young Black Moviemakers: Angry, Assertive and Aware." Ebony Nov. 1991: 156+.

Books and Book Reviews

Malcolm X: The FBI Files

Malcolm X: The FBI Files. Ed. David Gallen. New York: Carroll & Graf, 1991.

Five For Five: The Films of Spike Lee

Early, Gerald. Rev. of Five for Five: The Films of Spike Lee, by Terry McMillan. Times Literary Supplement 6 Sept. 1991: 18.

Gilroy, Paul. Rev. of Five for Five: The Films of Spike Lee, by Terry McMillan. Sight and Sound Oct. 1991: 36-37.

McMillan, Terry. Five For Five: The Films of Spike Lee. New York: Stewart, Tabori & Chang, 1991.

Do the Right Thing: A Spike Lee Joint

Chute, David. "Making Mookie." Rev. of Do the Right Thing: A Spike Lee Joint, by Spike Lee with Lisa Jones. Los Angeles Times Book Review 30 July 1989: 6.

Kempton, Murray. "The Pizza Is Burning." Rev. of Do the Right Thing: A Spike Lee Joint, by Spike Lee with Lisa Jones. New York Times Review of Books 28 Sept. 1989: 37-38.

Lee, Spike, with Lisa Jones. Do the Right Thing: A Spike Lee Joint. NY: Fireside, 1989.

Rev. of Do the Right Thing: A Spike Lee Joint, by Spike Lee with Lisa Jones. Variety 26 July 1989: 95.

Uplift the Race: The Construction of School Daze

Bartholomew, David. Rev. of Uplift the Race: The Construction of School Daze, by Spike Lee with Lisa Jones. Library Journal 15 Mar. 1988: 65.

Blackwood, R. Rev. of Uplift the Race: The Construction of School Daze, by Spike Lee with Lisa Jones. Choice July/Aug. 1988: 1702.

Lee, Spike, with Lisa Jones. Uplift the Race: The Construction of School Daze. New York: Simon and Schuster, 1988.

Mutter, John. Rev. of Uplift the Race: The Construction of School Daze, by Spike Lee with Lisa Jones. Publisher's Weekly 29 Jan. 1988: 425.

Poulson-Bryant, Scott. "Daze of Heaven." Rev. of Uplift the Race: The Construction of School Daze, by Spike Lee with Lisa Jones. Village Voice 16 Feb. 1988: 72.

Rev. of Uplift the Race: The Construction of School Daze, by Spike Lee with Lisa Jones. Booklist 15 Feb. 1988: 963.

Rev. of Uplift the Race: The Construction of School Daze, by Spike Lee with Lisa Jones. Essence July 1988: 28.

Rev. of Uplift the Race: The Construction of School Daze, by Spike Lee with Lisa Jones. Variety 24 Feb. 1988: 520.

Southgate, Martha. Rev. of Uplift the Race: The Construction of School Daze, by Spike Lee with Lisa Jones. New York Times Book Review 17 Apr. 1988: 43.

Spike Lee's She's Gotta Have It: Inside Guerrilla Filmmaking

Bartholomew, David. Rev. of Spike Lee's She's Gotta Have It: Inside Guerrilla Filmmaking, by Spike Lee. Library Journal Jan. 1988: 96.

"Fireside Signs Spike Lee to Two-Book Contract." Publisher's Weekly 12 June 1987: 59.

Lee, Spike. Spike Lee's She's Gotta Have It: Inside Guerrilla Filmmaking. New York: Fireside/Simon and Schuster, 1987.

Martin, Sharon Stockard. Rev. of Spike Lee's She's Gotta Have It: Inside Guerrilla Filmmaking, by Spike Lee. New York Times Book Review 13 Dec. 1987: 14.

Mutter, John. Rev. of Spike Lee's She's Gotta Have It: Inside Guerrilla Filmmaking, by Spike Lee. Publisher's Weekly 18 Sept. 1987: 180.

Rev. of Spike Lee's She's Gotta Have It: Inside Guerrilla Filmmaking, by Spike Lee. Booklist 15 Dec. 1987: 667.

Rev. of Spike Lee's She's Gotta Have It: Inside Guerilla Filmmaking, by Spike Lee. Village Voice 16 Feb. 1988: 72.

Film Criticism and Reviews

Malcolm X (In Progress)

Ansen, David. "The Battle for Malcolm X: Spike Lee's Upcoming Movie on the Prophet of Black Pride Ignites a Debate." Newsweek 26 Aug. 1991: 52-54.

Benjamin, Playthell. "Spike Lee: Bearing the Cross." Emerge Nov. 1991: 26-27+.

Lee, Spike. "The Director Takes On His Detractors." Newsweek 26 Aug. 1991: 53.

Nieves, Evelyn. "Film on Malcolm X, Yet To Be Made, Creates Firestorm: The Guardians of a Legacy Want Spike Lee To Do The Right Thing." New York Times 9 Aug. 1991, natl. ed.: B1.

Sterritt, David. "Making a Film of Malcolm X." Christian Science Monitor 12 Sept. 1991: 12.

Thompson, Anne. "Malcolm, Let's Do Lunch." Mother Jones July-Aug. 1991: 24-29+.

Trescott, Jacqueline. "The Battle Over Malcolm X: Spike Lee vs. Amiri Baraka: Who Should Immortalize the Man on Film, and How?" Washington Post 18 Aug. 1991: G1.

Jungle Fever (1991)

Blake, Richard A. Rev. of Jungle Fever. America 3 Aug. 1991: 73-74.

Brown, Patricia Leigh. "A Film in Progress on a Black Architect." New York Times 15 Nov. 1990, natl. ed., Currents sec.: B4.

Canby, Vincent. "Spike Lee's Jungle Fever Excites Cannes." New York Times 17 May 1991, natl. ed.: B1.

Canby, Vincent. "At Cannes, Anxiety Over American Influences." New York Times 23 May 1991, natl. ed., Living Arts Pages sec.: B1.

Canby, Vincent. "Spike Lee's Comedy of Sorrow." New York Times 7 June 1991, natl. ed.: B1.

Collier, Aldore. Rev. of Jungle Fever. Jet 10 June 1991: 56-60.

Day, B. Rev. of Jungle Fever. Guardian 19 June 1991: 20.

Denby, David. Rev. of Jungle Fever. New York 17 June 1991: 76-78.

Ellis, David. "Lost in the Jungle." Time 24 June 1991: 13.

Freidman, Samuel G. "Love and Hate In Black and White." New York Times 2 June 1991, natl. ed., sec. 2: H15+.

Grant, Edmond. Rev. of Jungle Fever. Films in Review July/Aug. 1991: 258-59.

Grenier, Richard. "Spike Lee Fever." Commentary Aug. 1991: 50-53.

Johnson, Brian D. Rev. of Jungle Fever. Maclean's 17 June 1991: 55.

Jones, James T. "Stevie's Jungle Adventure." Down Beat Sept. 1991: 16-18.

"'Jungle Fever.'" Editorial. Christian Science Monitor 18 June 1991: 20.

Kauffmann, Stanley. Rev. of Jungle Fever. New Republic 29 July 1991: 28-29.

Klawans, Stuart. Rev. of Jungle Fever. Nation 8 July 1991: 64.

Kroll, Jack. "Spiking a Fever: A Black-White Affair Is the Catalyst for Spike Lee's Panoramic View of Culture in a Color Bind." Newsweek 10 June 1991: 44-47.

McAdams, Janine. "Stevie Wonder Tells Musical Tale of 'Jungle Fever.'" Billboard Magazine 8 June 1991: 30.

Novak, Ralph. Rev. of Jungle Fever. People Weekly 17 June 1991: 15.

Rafferty, Terrence. "Skin Deep." New Yorker 17 June 1991: 99-101.

Rev. of Jungle Fever. Jet 3 June 1991: 57.

Salamon, Julie. "Film: Black-White Romance." Wall Street Journal 6 June 1991, eastern ed.: A16.

Simon, John. Rev. of Jungle Fever. National Review 29 July 1991: 48-49.

Sterritt, David. "Lee Follows His Own Tough Act." Christian Science Monitor 3 June 1991: 12.

Stevens, G. Rev. of Jungle Fever. In These Times 26 June 1991: 20.

Travers, Peter. "Sex In Black and White." Rolling Stone 27 June 1991: 75-76.

Williams, Lena. "Samuel L. Jackson: Out of Lee's 'Jungle,' Into the Limelight." New York Times 9 June 1991, natl. ed., sec. 2: H16.

Mo' Better Blues (1990)

Alleva, Richard. Rev. of Mo' Better Blues. Commonweal 28 Sept. 1990: 546-47.

Allis, Tim. "Right Thing Director Spike Lee Turns to Manhattan's Night Thing-- Jazz-- For a Sexy New Movie." People Weekly 5 Mar. 1990: 97-99.

Anderson, Pat. Rev. of Mo' Better Blues. Films in Review Nov./Dec. 1990: 555.

Ansen, David. Rev. of Mo' Better Blues. Newsweek 6 Aug. 1990: 62.

Blake, Richard A. Rev. of Mo' Better Blues. America 8 Sept. 1990: 136.

Bourget, J. L. Rev. of Mo' Better Blues. Positif 357 (1991): 70-71.

Bowman, James. Rev. of Mo' Better Blues. The American Spectator Oct. 1990: 37.

Brown, Dwight. "Spike Lee Hits Again with Mo' Better Blues." New American 2-8 Aug 1990: D1+.

Caleca, Vic. "Discordant Note Interrupts 'Blues.'" Indianapolis Star 3 Aug. 1990: D1+.

Caleca, Vic. "Jazz Movie Shows the Cooler Side of Spike Lee." Indianapolis Star 19 July 1990: E1+.

Calhoun, John. Rev. of Mo' Better Blues. Theatre Crafts Aug.-Sept. 1990: 26-31+.

Canby, Vincent. "Spike Lee Riffs About an Artist, Not a Genius." New York Times 26 Aug. 1990, natl. ed., sec. 2: H9.

Davis, Thulani. "Denzel in the Swing." American Film Aug. 1990: 26+.

Denby, David. Rev. of Mo Better Blues. New York 13 Aug. 1990: 65.

Desante, G. Rev. of Mo Better Blues. Cineforum 30.10 (1990): 34.

Dwyer, Victor. Rev. of Mo' Better Blues. Maclean's 6 Aug. 1990: 53.

Freedman, Samuel G. "Spike Lee and the 'Slavery' of the Blues." New York Times 29 July 1990: 1H+.

"Freeman, Washington Get Oscar Nods, Lee Snubbed." Jet 5 Mar. 1990: 54-55.

Gadzekpo, Audrey. "The Women in Denzel's Life." Indianapolis Recorder 4 Aug. 1990: B1.

James, Carym. Rev. of Mo Better Blues. New York Times 3 Aug. 1990, natl. ed., Living Arts Pages sec.: B1.

Katsahnias, Iannis. Rev. of Mo' Better Blues. Cahiers du Cinema Nov. 1990: 80-81.

Kauffmann, Stanley. Rev. of Mo' Better Blues. New Republic 3 Sept. 1990: 28-29.

Klawans, Stuart. Rev. of Mo' Better Blues. Nation 13 Aug. 1990: 179-80.

"Lee Denies He's Stereotyping." Indianapolis Star 23 Aug. 1990: E8.

Mitchell, Elvis. "Le Jazz Haute." Vogue Aug. 1990: 332-37.

Moore, Suzanne. Rev. of Mo' Better Blues. New Statesman & Society 21 Sept. 1990: 31-32.

Nelson, Jill. "Mo' Better Spike: In His Fourth Film, Spike Lee Throws the Dice Again." Essence Aug. 1990: 54-55+.

Norment, Lynn. "Mo' Better Blues: Backstage With Spike Lee and the Cast." Ebony Sept. 1990: 76-78.

Novak, Ralph. Rev. of Mo' Better Blues. People Weekly 13 Aug. 1990: 11.

Pitman, Randy. Rev. of Mo' Better Blues. Library Journal 15 Feb. 1991: 238.

Rafferty, Terrence. Rev. of Mo' Better Blues. New Yorker 13 Aug. 1990: 82+.

Rainer, Peter. Rev. of Mo' Better Blues. American Film Feb. 1991: 52.

Salamon, Julie. Rev. of Mo' Better Blues. Wall Street Journal 9 Aug. 1990, western ed.: A6.

Schickle, Richard. Rev. of Mo' Better Blues. Time 20 Aug. 1990: 62.

Simon, John. Rev. of Mo' Better Blues. National Review 3 Sept. 1990: 48+.

Sterritt, David. Rev. of Mo' Better Blues. Christian Science Monitor 1 Aug. 1990: 15.

Travers, Peter. Rev. of Mo' Better Blues. Rolling Stone 23 Aug. 1990: 45.

Valot, J. Rev. of Mo' Better Blues. Revue Du Cinema 465 (1990): 22.

Walker, Jesse H. "Spike Lee Making His Newest in NY." Amsterdam News [New York] 2 Dec. 1989: 34.

Do the Right Thing (1989)

Ansen, David. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. Newsweek 3 July 1989: 64-66.

A-Salaam, Yusef. "Does Do the Right Thing Have Wrong Emphasis?" Amsterdam News [New York] 22 July 1989: 23+.

Bell, Alan. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. Los Angeles Sentinel 29 June 1989, sec. B: 8.

Black, Isaac J. "Spike Lee Fights the Powers That Be." Amsterdam News [New York] 19 Aug. 1989: 15+.

Blake, Richard A. "Gray Tones." America 12 Aug. 1989: 86-87.

Boyd, Herb. "Does Lee Do The Right Thing?" Guardian 5 July 1989: 24+.

Bryant, Steve. "Spike Lee's Do The Right Thing: A Powerful Cinematic Statement." Michigan Chronicle [Detroit] 24 June 1989: B1.

Canby, Vincent. "Spike Lee Stirs Things Up With Do The Right Thing at Cannes Festival." New York Times 20 May 1989, natl. ed., Living Arts Pages sec.: 12.

Canby, Vincent. "Spike Lee Raises the Movie's Black Voice." New York Times 28 May 1989, national ed., sec. 2: H11.

Canby, Vincent. "Do The Right Thing." New York Times 30 June 1989, natl. ed.: B1.

Canby, Vincent. "New York City's Problems Are In The Picture." New York Times 2 July 1989, sec. B: 9.

Canby, Vincent. "Oscar Is Sometimes a Grouch." New York Times 25 Feb. 1990, sec. 2: H1.

Cardullo, Bert. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. The Hudson Review 42 (1990): 613+.

Chrisman, Robert. "What Is the Right Thing? Notes on the Deconstruction of Black Ideology." Black Scholar Mar.-May 1990: 53-57.

Corliss, Richard. "Hot Time In Bed-Stuy Tonight." Time 3 July 1989: 62.

Day, Barbara. "Spike Lee Wakes Up Movie Audiences: Confronts Questions of Black Power." Guardian 5 July 1989: 88-89.

Denby, David. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. New York 26 June 1989: 53-54.

Dick, Jeff T. "Making of Do The Right Thing." Library Journal 15 May 1990: 106-107.

"Did They Do The Right Thing?" Editorial. Los Angeles Times 16 Feb. 1990: B6.

"'Do The Right Thing.'" Editorial. Christian Science Monitor 11 July 1989: 20.

"Do The Right Thing Honored." New York Times 19 Dec. 1989, natl. ed., Living Arts Pages sec.: B3.

"Do The Right Thing: Spike Lee's New Film on Racism." Christian Science Monitor 11 July 1989: 20.

Doherty, Thomas. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. Film Quarterly 43: 35-40.

Dyson, Michael Eric. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. Tikkun Sept.-Oct. 1989: 75+.

Emerson, Jim. "Driving Miss Daisy Feels Backlash in Print, On Rap." Indianapolis Star 6 May 1990: E3.

Gilliam, Dorothy. "Give Spike Lee a Break." Washington Post 10 July 1989: D3.

Gold, Richard. "Spike Lee Plans Start in August on Next Feature; Avoiding Col and Tri-Star." Variety 30 Mar. 1988: 6+.

Gold, Richard. "Spike Lee's Latest Does The Lucrative Thing: Brooklyn Filmer Fighting Off Controversy." Variety 5 July 1989: 5.

"Golden Globe Bids In For Spike Lee's 'Right Thing,' [Morgan] Freeman and [Denzel] Washington." Jet 15 Jan. 1990: 52.

Goodman, Ellen. "Women In Spike Lee's World." Washington Post 18 July 1989: A23.

Grant, Edmond. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. Films in Review 40 (1989): 484-86.

Handelman, David. "Insight to Riot." Rolling Stone 13 July 1989: 104+.

Jacobson, Harlan. Rev. of Do The Right Thing. Film Comment July/Aug. 1989: 68-69.

Kauffmann, Stanley. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. The New Republic 3 July 1989: 24+.

Kaufman, Michael T. "In a New Film, Spike Lee Tries to Do The Right Thing." New York Times 25 June 1989, natl. ed., sec. 2: H1.

Kempton, Murray. "Spike Lee's Self-Contempt." Washington Post 3 Aug. 1989: A27.

"Kim Basinger Rips Academy for Snubbing Spike Lee's Film." Jet Apr. 16 1990: 27+.

Klawans, Stuart. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. The Nation 17 July 1989: 98-100.

Korman, Kenneth. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. Video Feb. 1990: 61.

Kroll, Jack. Rev. of Do The Right Thing. Newsweek 3 July 1989: 64-66.

Kunen, James S. "Spike Lee Inflames the Critics with a Film He Swears Is The Right Thing." People Weekly 10 July 1989: 67-68.

Larner, Jeremy. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. Dissent 36 (1989): 559-61.

Lee, Spike. Rev. of Do The Right Thing. New York 17 July 1989: 6.

"Lee's Next, 'Do The Right Thing,' Is Set For Release By Universal." Variety 1 June 1988: 32.

Lester, Sheena. "'Right Thing' Has Got the 'Right Stuff.'" Los Angeles Sentinel 29 June 1989, sec. A: A1+.

McGilligan, Pat, and Mark Rowland. "If Critics Picked the Oscars." American Film Apr. 1990: 26-31.

McLane, Daismann. "Known For His Stylish Satire, Spike Lee Takes on Darker Issues of Violence and Racism in His New Film Do The Right Thing." Vogue July 1989: 76-80.

McLendon, Lowery. "Can White People Do The Right Thing?" Amsterdam News [New York] 29 July 1989: 13.

"Making Do The Right Thing." Variety 6 Sept. 1989: 29.

Marable, Manning. "Manning Marable Comments on the Controversy Surrounding Spike Lee's Treatment of Race Relations in His Film Do The Right Thing." Afro-American [Baltimore] 5 Aug. 1989, sec. A: 5.

Marriott, Michel. "Brooklyn's Reactions to a Film on Racism: Spike Lee's Movie Inspires Debate Where It Was Made." New York Times 3 July 1989, natl. ed., Living Arts Pages sec.: 11.

Marriott, Michel. "Raw Reactions to Film on Racial Tensions." New York Times 3 July 1989, sec. A: 21+.

Miller, Calvin. "Why Pick On Lee?" Journal & Guide [Norfolk, VA] 19 July 1989: 6.

Mitchell, W. J. T. "The Violence of Public Art: Do The Right Thing." Critical Inquiry 16 (1990): 880-99.

Mitchell, W. J. T. "Seeing Do The Right Thing." Critical Inquiry 17 (1991): 596-609.

Moore, Trudy S. "Spike Lee Explores Racial Conflict in Do The Right Thing." Jet 10 July 1989: 36-39.

Morrone, John. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. The New Leader 18 Sept. 1989: 21-22.

Morton, Bridget Balthrop. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. Commonweal 20 Oct. 1989: 562-63.

Muwakkil, Salim. "Director Spike Lee Burns Up the Screen with a Hot Slice of Life." In These Times 5 July 1989: 24+.

Novak, Ralph. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. People Weekly 3 July 1989: 13-14.

Nowell-Smith, Geoffrey. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. Sight and Sound 58: 281.

O'Brien, Tom. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. Commonweal 14 July 1989: 402-403.

Omphroy, Lisa R. "Talking About Spike Lee's 'Doing [sic] The Right Thing.'" Amsterdam News [New York] 12 Aug. 1989: 30.

"Oscar Robbed Spike's Movie." Indianapolis Star 2 Mar. 1990: C20.

Paige, Nathan. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. Call & Post [Cleveland, OH] 3 Aug. 1989, sec. D: 4.

Payne, Les. "Les Payne Discusses Spike Lee's Use of Two Seemingly Contradictory Quotes by Malcolm X and Martin Luther King at the End of His Film Do the Right Thing." Afro-American [Baltimore] 5 Aug. 1989, sec. A: 5.

Pitman, Randy. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. Library Journal Jan. 1990: 164.

Rafferty, Terrence. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. The New Yorker 24 July 1989: 78-81.

Rainer, Peter. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. American Film Jan. 1990: 60.

"Reproduction: Spike Lee." Communication Arts Magazine July 1990: 68.

Rev. of Do the Right Thing. Call & Post [Cleveland, OH] 6 July 1989, sec. B: 3.

Rev. of Do The Right Thing. Variety 24 May 1989: 26.

Reynaud, Berenice. "Do The Right Thing Fait Des Vagues." Cahiers du Cinema Sept. 1989: 423.

"Right or Wrong?" The Economist 15 July 1989: 88-89.

Robeson, Paul Jr., and Mel Williamson. "Doing the Wrong Thing." Amsterdam News [New York] 22 July 1989: 15+.

Rosenbaum, Ron. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. Mademoiselle Aug. 1989: 94+.

Rushin, Kate. "Doing the Right Thing? Is Better Than Hollywood Good Enough?" Gay Community News 6-12 Aug. 1989: 8.

Saada, Nicolas. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. Cahiers du Cinema June 1989: 6-8.

Salamon, Julie. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. Wall Street Journal 29 June 1989, western ed.: A11.

Sanoff, Alvin. "Doing The Controversial Thing." U.S. News & World Report 10 July 1989: 51.

Schwartz, Amy E. "Spike Lee Sees a Terrible Thing." Washington Post 8 Aug. 1989: A17.

Simon, John. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. National Review 4 Aug. 1989: 45-46+.

Sinclair, Abiola. "Danny Aiello: I Created Sal." Amsterdam News [New York] 5 Aug. 1989: 30.

Sinclair, Abiola. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. Amsterdam News [New York] 1 July 1989: 30.

Sinclair, Abiola. "What! No Drugs, Spike?" Amsterdam News [New York] 15 July 1989: 30.

Sklar, Robert, Jacquie Jones, Salim Muwakkil, et al. "What Is The Right Thing? A Critical Symposium on Spike Lee's Do The Right Thing." Cineaste 17.4 (1990): 32-39.

"Spike Lee's Efforts to Do the Right Thing." American Vision June 1989: 8-9.

Staples, Brent. "Spike Lee's Blacks: Are They Real People? Do the Simplistic Characters of Do The Right Thing Foster Stereotyping?" New York Times 2 July 1989, natl. ed., sec. 2: H9+.

Sterritt, David. "Cannes: Potent U.S. Films." Christian Science Monitor 30 May 1989: 11.

Sterritt, David. "Spike Lee's Hotly Debated New Film." Christian Science Monitor 27 June 1989: 15.

Sterritt, David. "Spike Lee Gives Best View Yet of Ghetto Life." Christian Science Monitor 26 July 1989: 11.

Still, Larry. "Urban League Conclave: Time to Do The Right Thing." Chicago Defender 7 Sept. 1989, daily ed.: 14.

Stiven, Kristine. "Nike Thinks Spike's Doing the Right Thing." Adweek Western Advertising News 17 July 1989: 6.

Travers, Peter. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. Rolling Stone 29 June 1989: 27-28.

Van Gelder, Lawrence. "Summer In The City." New York Times 5 Aug. 1988, natl. ed.: 19.

Wall, James M. "Do The Right Thing: A Jarring Look at Racism." Christian Century 16 Aug. 1989: 739-40.

Wall, James M. Rev. of Do the Right Thing. Christian Century 24 Jan. 1990: 67.

White, Armond. "Scene on the Street: Black Cinema From Catfish Row to Stuyvesant Avenue." Mother Jones Sept. 1989: 35+.

School Daze (1988)

Aufderheide, Pat. "Racial Schisms: The Daze of Our Lives." In These Times 16 Mar. 1988: 20.

Bogle, Donald. "Movies: Spike Lee's School Daze." Black Arts Annual 1987/88. Ed. Donald Bogle. New York: Garland, 1989. 165-67+.

Boyd, Herb. "School Daze Identity Problem." Amsterdam News [New York] 20 Feb. 1988: 25.

Boyd, Herb. "School Daze Has Identity Problem." Guardian 16 Mar. 1988: 20.

Bryant, Steve. "School Daze, A Comical, Honest Look at Black College Life." Michigan Chronicle [Detroit] 20 Feb. 1988: B1.

Buss, Robin. Rev. of School Daze. Times Educational Supplement 12 Aug. 1988: 19.

Canby, Vincent. Rev. of School Daze. New York Times 28 Jan. 1990, natl. ed., sec. 2: H32.

Conent, Janet. "A Question of Class and Color: Spike Lee Takes a Hard Look at Black College Life." Newsweek 15 Feb. 1988: 62.

Cooper, Carole. "Homeboy Hopeful." Village Voice 8 Jan. 1985:11-12.

Davis, Thulani. "Daze of Our Lives: Did Spike Lee Get It With School Daze?" Village Voice 33 Mar. 1988: 35-39.

Denby, David. Rev. of School Daze. New York 29 Feb. 1988: 117.

Dyson, Michael. "Spiking the Punch." Christianity and Crisis 2 May 1988: 163-64.

Felton, Tony. "At the Movies: School Daze: Spike Lee on Do's, Don't's of Blackness." Journal & Guide [Norfolk, VA] 10 Feb. 1988: 9+.

George, Nelson. "School Daze Soundtrack Set: Lee's Film Features Varied Styles, Stars." Billboard 6 Feb. 1988: 27.

Gilliam, Dorothy. "Real-Life Trauma Trivialized." Washington Post 3 Mar. 1988: 85.

Goldberg, Michael. Rev. of School Daze. Rolling Stone 30 June 1988: 21.

"Island Drops Lee's Daze Musical Pic: Col's Holding a Net." Variety 4 Feb. 1987: 6.

Jackson, Rhodesia. "School Daze." Black Collegian Mar.-Apr. 1988: 148.

Johnson, Pamela. "The Making of School Daze: Behind the Scenes." Essence Feb. 1988: 51-52.

Jones, Debra. "School Daze Throws Race Back 200 Years." Amsterdam News [New York] 20 Feb. 1988, Arts & Entertainment sec.: 23+.

Lee, Spike. "Class Act." American Film Jan.-Feb. 1988: 57-58.

Luck, Sharon W. "Spike Lee's Film Gets Mixed Reviews." Chicago Defender 29 Feb. 1988, daily ed.: 12-13.

Lynton, Linda. Rev. of School Daze. American Cinematographer Feb. 1988: 67-72.

Maslin, Janet. Rev. of School Daze. New York Times 12 Feb. 1988, natl. ed.: 18.

Miller, Marcus, and Spike Lee. "In Defense of 'Da Butt.'" Harper's Magazine. July 1988: 28-30.

Milloy, Courtland. "School Daze Cop-Out." Washington Post 23 Feb. 1988: B3.

Mitchell, Elvis. "A For Effort: But A Different World and School Daze Get Lower Grades For Achievement." Rolling Stone 21 Apr. 1988: 32+.

Moore, Suzanne. Rev. of School Daze. New Statesman and Society 29 July 1988: 52.

Moore, Trudy S. "Spike Lee's School Daze Takes Comic Look at Life on Black College Campus." Jet 22 Feb. 1988: 28-31.

Muwakkil, Salim. "The Middle Class and Lee's School of Hard Knocks." In These Times 16 Mar. 1988: 21.

Nash, Dawn. "School Daze Didn't Have It: Studio Support Spiked." Black Enterprise May 1988: 39.

"Owens: Morehouse Can Take Movie's Satire." Amsterdam News [New York] 6 June 1987: 11.

Reynaud, Berenice. Rev. of School Daze. Cahiers du Cinema Apr. 1988: 35-36.

Rogers, Charles E. "Spike's Dazzling 'Daze.'" Amsterdam News [New York] 20 Feb. 1988, Arts & Entertainment sec.: 23-24.

Rose, Sonya. "Inner-city in a 'Daze' Over Spike Lee's Movie." Chicago Defender 12 Apr. 1988, daily ed.: 11.

Rose, Sonya. "Exposition on Mission in School Daze." Chicago Defender 26 Apr. 1988, daily ed., Life/Times sec.: 11.

Rev. of School Daze. Ebony Feb. 1988: 172+.

Rev. of School Daze. New York Times 9 Oct. 1988, natl. ed., sec. 2: H30.

Rev. of School Daze. Variety 17 Feb. 1988: 22.

Sinclair, Abiola. "A Spike Lee Joint-- With A Few Disjointed Problems." Amsterdam News [New York] 20 Feb. 1988, Arts & Entertainment sec.: 23+.

"Spike Lee Returns With Another Major Film: School Daze." Ebony Feb. 1988: 172+.

"Spike Lee Speaks for Himself on Controversy About New Film." Chicago Defender 22 Mar. 1988, daily ed.: 11.

Trojan, Judith. Rev. of School Daze. Wilson Library Bulletin May 1988: 82+.

Wallace, Michele. Rev. of She's Gotta Have It and School Daze. The Nation 4 June 1988: 800-803.

Wheeler, Drew. Rev. of School Daze. Video Nov. 1988: 79.

She's Gotta Have It (1986)

Ansen, David. Rev. of She's Gotta Have It. Newsweek 8 Sept. 1986: 65.

Bollag, Brenda. "NY Independent Cinema at Cannes: Jim Jarmusch's Down By Law and Spike Lee's She's Gotta Have It." Film Quarterly 40 (1986): 11-13.

Bruckner, D. J. R. "Film: Spike Lee's She's Gotta Have It." New York Times 8 Aug. 1986, natl. ed.: 14.

Canby, Vincent. "Films For Viewers Who Think For Themselves." New York Times 7 Sept. 1986, natl. ed., sec. 2: 27-28.

Canby, Vincent. Rev. of She's Gotta Have It. New York Times 28 Jan. 1990, natl. ed., sec. 2: H32.

Chevrie, Marc. Rev. of She's Gotta Have It. Cahiers du Cinema June 1986: 40.

Darnton, Nina. "Spectacular Success For All-Black Comedy." New York Times 14 Nov. 1986, natl. ed.: 17.

Denby, David. Rev. of She's Gotta Have It. New York 18 Aug. 1986: 59.

Frechette, David. "Spike Lee's Declaration of Independence." Black Enterprise Dec. 1986: 56-58+.

Fusco, Coco. Rev. of She's Gotta Have It. Cineaste 15.3 (1987): 24.

Gold, Richard. "Lee Sez MPAA [Motion Picture Association of America] 'Rigid, Unfair' Regarding Cut of 'Gotta Have It.'" Variety 13 Aug. 1986: 7.

"He's Gotta Have It: Director Spike Lee Reaches for Fame as Great Filmmaker." Ebony Jan. 1987: 42+.

hooks, bell. "'Whose Pussy Is This?' A Feminist Comment." Talking Back: Thinking Feminist, Thinking Black. Boston, MA: Southend Press, 1989. 134-41.

Johnson, Pamela. "They've Gotta Have It." Black Enterprise July 1989: 36-44.

Jones, Marsha. Rev. of She's Gotta Have It. About . . . Time [Rochester, NY] Oct 1986: 24-25.

Katsahnias, Iannis. Rev. of She's Gotta Have It. Cahiers du Cinema Jan. 1987: 46-47.

Kauffmann, Stanley. Rev. of She's Gotta Have It. New Republic 15 Sept. 1986: 30.

Keel, Pauline. Rev. of She's Gotta Have It. New Yorker 6 Oct. 1986: 128+.

Kelly, Ernece B. "A 'You Gotta See It' Movie." New Directions for Women Jan. 1987: 7.

McHenry, Susan. Rev. of She's Gotta Have It. Ms. Magazine Oct. 1986: 14+.

Mieher, S. "Spike Lee's Gotta Have It." New York Times Magazine 9 Aug. 1987: 26-29+.

Nelson, Jill. "Spike Lee's Black Comedy of Manners." Guardian 29 Oct. 1986: 20.

Nicholson, David. "The Great Black Hope: Spike Lee's She's Gotta Have It Just Might Be the Breakthrough." Black Film Review 2.3 (1986): 28-31.

Raynaud, Berenice. Rev. of She's Gotta Have It. Afterimage Dec. 1986: 3-4.

Redin, Victoria. Rev. of She's Gotta Have It. New Statesman 24 Oct. 1986: 27.

Rohter, L. "Spike Lee Makes His Movie." New York Times 10 Aug. 1986, natl. ed., sec. 2: H14.

Ross, Michael E. Rev. of She's Gotta Have It. New York Times 30 Aug. 1987, natl. ed., sec. 2: H22.

Scott, W. A. "Lee Earns Film Festival Best New Director Honor." Atlanta Daily World 16 Oct. 1986: 6.

"Sex and the Single Girl, Spike Lee's Funky Hit." Newsweek 8 Sept. 1986: 65.

Rev. of She's Gotta Have It. Film Review Annual: 1986. Englewood, NJ: J. S. Ozer, 1987: 1240-47.

Rev. of She's Gotta Have It. New Statesman 6 Mar. 1987: 32.

Rev. of She's Gotta Have It. Time 6 Oct. 1986: 94.

Rozzell, Liane. "Double Standards Times Three: The Debut of a Black Independent Filmmaker." Sojourners: An Independent Christian Monthly Dec. 1986: 46-48.

Rushin, Kate. "She's Gotta Have It Directed By Spike Lee." Radical America June 1986: 71.

"She's Gotta Have It, 1986, Lee, Spike." Blacks in American Film and Television: An Encyclopedia. Ed. Donald Bogle. New York: Garland Publishing, 1988. 187-208.

"She's Gotta Have It: Flawed Rites-of-Passage Feature." Variety 2 Apr. 1986: 20+.

"She's Gotta Have It Grossed Over $1 Million in Six Weeks After It Opened in August." Black Enterprise Dec. 1986: 56-58+.

Simmonds, Felly Nkweto. "She's Gotta Have It: The Representation of Black Female Sexuality on Film." Feminist Review 29 (1988): 10-22.

Simpson, Phillis L. "She's Got To Have It [sic] Fails to Have Whatever." Amsterdam News [New York] 18 Oct. 1986: 49.

"Spike Lee's She's Gotta Have It." The Crisis Oct. 1986: 431.

"Spike Lee Is Critically Acclaimed." Chicago Defender 27 Sept. 1986, Big Weekend ed.: 31.

"Spike Lee Wins Honor for She's Gotta Have It." Jet 19 Jan. 1987: 26.

Stanton, Louise. Rev. of She's Gotta Have It. Films in Review 37 (1986): 549-50.

Travers, Peter. Rev. of She's Gotta Have It. People Weekly 20 Oct. 1986: 10.

Wallace, Michele. Rev. of She's Gotta Have It and School Daze. The Nation 4 June 1988: 800-803.

Wynter, Leon. "Checking Out Spike Lee." Wall Street Journal 12 Nov. 1986, eastern ed.: 30.

Joe's Bed-Stuy Barbershop: We Cut Heads (1982)

Canby, Vincent. Rev. of Joe's Bed-Stuy Barbershop: We Cut Heads. New York Times 3 Nov. 1989, natl. ed., Living Arts Pages sec.: B5.

"Joe's Bed-Stuy Barbershop: We Cut Heads." Film Review Annual: 1984. Englewood, NJ: J. S. Ozer, 1984. 555-56.

Maslin, Janet. "Screen: 'Barbershop' and Italian 'Truuuth.'" New York Times 30 Mar. 1983: 15.

Rev. of Joe's Bed-Stuy Barbershop: We Cut Heads. Variety 30 Mar. 1983: 15.

Entrepreneurship and Conduct of Life

Brown, Anita. "Nike Spikes It." Marketing & Media Decisions June 1990: 26.

Brown, Kathy. "Spike Lee Dreams of Little Richard." Adweek Western Advertising News 11 Feb. 1991: 3.

Calloway, Earl. "Spike Lee Gives $25,000 to UNCF [United Negro College Fund] Scholarship Fund." Chicago Defender 1 July 1989, Big Weekend ed.: 31.

Cray, Dan. "Spike's 501 Ads: Mo' Better Blues." Adweek 30 July 1990: 4.

Elliot, Stuart. "Levi and Spike Lee Return In 'Button Your Fly' Part 2." New York Times 22 July 1991, natl. ed.: C7.

"Filmmaker Lee Charges Koch." Chicago Defender 28 Aug. 1989, daily ed.: 8.

Foltz, Kim. "Nike's 2 Stars Appear in a New Campaign." New York Times 31 Jan. 1991, natl. ed.: C15.

Freeman, Laurie. "Flat-Footed: Ad Campaigns Try to Spark Sales As Sports Shoes Hit Plateau." Stores Aug. 1991: 67+.

Garcia, Shelly. "Lee Avoids the Spike as He Runs With Bulls in New Levi's 501 Ad." Adweek Western Advertising News 26 Aug. 1991: 4.

Garfield, Bob. "Levi's Buttons Up and Flies Right With Delightful Spike Lee Ads." Advertising Age 6 Aug. 1990: 38.

George, Nelson. "Did Public Enemy Do The Right Thing?" Billboard Magazine 8 July 1989: 22.

Goldrich, Robert. "Spike Lee Directs Levi's 501: Puts an End to the 'Blues.'" Back Stage Shoot 25 May 1990: 7+.

Goldrich, Robert. "FCB/S.F. Buttons Levi's Fly: Debuts Spike Lee, Animation Work." Back Stage Shoot 3 Aug. 1990: 6.

Goldrich, Robert. "Director Lee Addresses the L.A. Ad Club." Back Stage Shoot 5 April 1991: 1.

Horowitz, Bruce. "Magazine Puts New Spin on Rock Music." Los Angeles Times 26 June 1990: D6.

Horowitz, Bruce. "Spike Lee to Address Ad Club." Los Angeles Times 19 Mar. 1991: D6.

Horowitz, Mark. "Public Enemy Number One." American Film Sept. 1989: 15.

Klawans, Stuart. "American Notes." Times Literary Supplement 6 Oct. 1989: 1092.

Klein, Joe. "Spiked?" New York 26 June 1989: 14-15.

La Ferla, Ruth. "The Right Thing in Brooklyn." New York Times 31 July 1990: B4.

Lee, Spike. "Spike Lee Replies: 'Say It Ain't So Joe.'" New York Times 17 July 1989, natl. ed.: 6.

Lee, Spike. "I Am Not An Anti-Semitic." Letter. New York Times 22 Aug. 1990, natl. ed.: A25.

"Lee Spikes Offer for Spot." Los Angeles Times 2 Apr. 1991: D6.

Lippert, Barbara. "Lee's Filmmaking Makes Levi's The Mo' Better Blue Jeans." Adweek Western Advertising News 6 Aug. 1990: 19.

Lippert, Barbara. "Spike Makes Levi's The Mo' Better Jeans." Adweek's Marketing Week 6 Aug. 1990: 61.

Lippert, Barbara. "Crossing Cultures: Spike Lee and Matisse." Adweek 5 Aug. 1991: 12.

Magiera, Marcy. "Levi's Spikes 501 Ads: Hot Young Director Is Dektor's Successor." Advertising Age 19 Mar. 1990: 3.

Magiera, Marcy. "Levi Buttons Up 501 Spots." Advertising Age 30 July 1990: 44.

"Nike Pairs Michael Jordan With a Down-to-Earth Guy." New York Times 20 Feb. 1989, natl. ed.: C7.

O'Leary, Noreen. "Spike Lee's Gotta Have His 501s." Adweek Eastern Edition 21 May 1990: 1+.

O'Leary, Noreen. "Is Spike Gonna Do Right By 501s?" Adweek Western Advertising News 21 May 1990: 1+.

Reilly, Rick. "He's Gotta Pitch It: Filmmaker and Superfan Spike Lee Has Thrown Some New Curves Into Sports Advertising." Sports Illustrated 27 May 1991: 74-84.

Robinson, Major. "Did $100,000 Gift Silence UNCF?" Amsterdam News [New York] 19 Mar. 1988: 32.

"Spike Donates 25G to UNCF [United Negro College Fund]." Amsterdam News [New York] 20 Feb. 1988: 34.

"Spike Lee Films Ad for Jackson to Show His Support." Jet 2 May 1988: 9.

"Spike Lee Runs With the Bulls in Spanish Rite." Jet 29 July 1991: 51.

"Spike Lee's Movie Starts New Dance Craze: 'Da Butt.'" Jet 13 June 1988: 58-60.

Strugatch, Warren. "Spike Lee in Bensonhurst: An Autograph Party." The Quill Nov. 1989: 29.

Walker, Jesse H. "Butt Repeats Among New York's Power Brokers." Amsterdam News [New York] 2 Sept. 1989: 34.

"Wearing a Team's Hat Is a National Pastime." New York Times 3 July 1989, natl. ed.: 27.

Weaver, Jane. "Scorses Directs AIDS Ads." Adweek 6 Aug. 1990: 59.

Weaver, Jane. "Scorses and Spike Direct AIDS Spots." Adweek Western Advertising News 6 Aug. 1990: 59.

Williams, Lisa. "Nike Does 'The Right Thing.'" Footwear News Magazine July 1990: 10+.